CAMPUS

Osher Institute gains endowment

The Bernard Osher Foundation has given $1 million to endow the Osher Lifelong Learning Institute in the School of Continuing Studies.

The Osher Institute serves members age 50 and older from the local community, linking them to educational opportunities on campus and providing noncredit courses, lectures, travel, and other programs.

The institute is one of 115 Osher programs that the San Francisco-based foundation has helped establish on college campuses around the country. It is the second in Virginia to become endowed.

More than 600 Richmond-area residents participate in the Osher Institute at UR, a number that was a major consideration in the foundation's decision to endow the institute. "Our start-up program grew from zero to more than 600 members in only three years of operation" says Jane Dowrick, the institute's director. "The members are interested in a wide range of liberal arts topics and are very active learners." Sally Yates Wood, W'69, G'71, and U'80, attends Osher Institute classes with her father, John Wood. "My father will be 93 in January," Wood says. "Osher classes give him an outlet to the world, continued learning, and new friendships."

The $1 million endowment is in addition to $400,000 the foundation has given the School of Continuing Studies since 2004 to launch the institute. Reflecting its broad interest in supporting educational opportunities for adults, the foundation recently made a separate $100,000 gift to the University to provide scholarships for adult students pursuing degrees through the School of Continuing Studies.

Bernard Osher is a prominent businessman, community leader, and philanthropist. He established the foundation to support higher education and the arts and, more recently, to foster lifelong learning programs.

Meet the president

The University invites alumni and parents of current students to meet President Ed Ayers at a series of receptions this spring.

Ayers will host events in the following cities: San Diego (Jan. 29), Los Angeles (Jan. 30), San Francisco (Feb. 1), Tampa, Fla. (Feb. 12), Naples, Fla. (Feb. 13), Palm Beach, Fla. (Feb. 15), Boston (Feb. 27), Greenwich, Conn. (Feb. 28), Summit, N.J. (Feb. 29), and Chicago (May 21).

Locations and dates are subject to change. For the latest schedule, visit UROnline.net.

University launches digital laboratory

The University has established a new lab for creating digital resources to enhance scholarship and teaching.

Located in Boatwright

Osher instructor Robin Poulton teaches "All the Way to Timbuktu" in traditional attire from Mali.

Memorial Library, the Digital Scholarship Lab "will serve as an incubator for the development of innovative digital tools," says Kathy Monday, vice president for information services. "It will bring together scholars, technologists, librarians, and appropriate resources."

President Ed Ayers, a pioneer of digital scholarship in the humanities, led the movement to create the lab. He was founding executive director of the Virginia Center for Digital History, and his prize-winning Web site, "The Valley of the Shadow: Two Communities in the American Civil War," has been accessed millions of times.

"Digital scholarship is entering a new era, and I hope the University of Richmond can be at the forefront," Ayers says. "Visualization and mapping, in particular, hold out exciting opportunities, and the Digital Scholarship Lab can pioneer in that work."

Faculty members and students will use the lab to create online mapping interfaces for their research, data visualization, models, animations, and wiki-style programs that will allow students to share classroom insights with one another.

The lab also will partner with institutions and individuals outside the University to leverage its digital resources.

AWARDS

Holton a finalist for National Book Award

Woody Holton, associate professor of history, has been named a nonfiction finalist for a 2007 National Book Award for his work Unruly Americans and the Origins of the Constitution.

Holton's book portrays the framing of the U.S. Constitution as a struggle between aristocratic founding fathers and ordinary American farmers. He argues that the founding fathers were wary of the "excess of democracy" that was threatening their financial interests as it emerged among the states. They tried to curtail states' rights and individual freedoms, but rebellion among average Americans forced the founding fathers to guarantee more personal liberties in the Constitution.

The National Book Awards were established in 1950 to recognize American literary excellence. Finalists receive a bronze medal and $1,000.

Celebrating Cuban music

If your knowledge of Cuban music begins and ends with Desi Arnaz and Gloria Estefan, Dr. Mike Davison, professor of music, wants to introduce you to a rich musical heritage that he believes changed the course of American music.

Whether it's son, salsa, rumba, mambo, or other Cuban styles, Davison (pictured above) has become one of the leading experts. He has visited the Caribbean country 13 times in the past eight years, taking Richmond students with him until 2004, when the U.S. government declared that undergraduates could take only semester-long trips to Cuba.

For the past two years, Davison and independent producer Ed Tillett have collaborated on a documentary about Cuban music that premiered Nov. 30 in Camp Concert Hall.

"Cuba: Rhythm in Motion," is an hour-long "celebration of sharing music across the water," Davison says. "We might not have ragtime or jazz or even rock 'n' roll," he says, "if not for the help of Cuban music," which blends rhythms and sounds from Africa, Western Europe, and North America. Conversely, Cubans have been influenced by American music, especially jazz, and continue to draw from it today, he says.

For their documentary, Davison and Tillett gained extraordinary access to both internationally known Cuban musicians and everyday dancers and singers, often finding them on street corners or in small cafes in Havana. In Miami last spring, they interviewed 89-year-old, Grammy Award-winning Israel "Cachao" Lopez, who invented the "descarga," a jazz-like, improvisational style, and the mambo and continues to perform around the world.

The video also includes faces that will be familiar to a UR audience. Appearing along with Davison are Myra Daleng, director of dance, and alumnus Mark Lomanno, '02, who accompanied Davison to Cuba.

Davison, who plays trumpet, says Cuban music is "a celebration of humanity."

HISTORY Digging for treasure in Boatwright dump

In the basement of retired history professor Harrison Daniel's home, a dusty bottle collection provides a glimpse of the good ol' days on Bostwick Lane.

Beginning in 1914, Bostwick Lane was the happy playground of nearly 100 faculty children, including Daniel's daughter, Ann Margaret, and Brian Bolt, R'86, the son of retired history professor Ernie Bolt.

When Brian and Ann Margaret were about 10 years old, they started digging for treasure in what they called "Boatwright dump," an old refuse pile behind the house where President Frederic Boatwright lived for many years.

They unearthed bottles that contained everything from baby formula to Milk of Magnesia. (One bottle still has fermented honey in it.) Some of the bottles date back to the 1920s and 1930s, when faculty offspring—including Trustee Emeritus Charles Ryland, R'36, L'39 and H'71—swam in the water tower at the end of Bostwick Lane.

The water tower is long gone, and so are the children. But Daniel's wife, Margaret Daniel, catches up with many of them in "The Children of Bostwick Lane," a Web bonus feature at magazine.richmond.edu.

VBHS opens exhibit on University history
An exhibit summarizing the University's history will be on display at the Virginia Baptist Historical Society until July 1.

"Richmond Adventure: History in a Nutshell" traces UR's history from the earliest days of Dunlora Academy to present.

Assembled by Michael Whitt, R'78, the exhibit uses documents, photographs, and artifacts to tell the Richmond story. Whitt is the special projects assistant at the historical society, which manages the University's archives in a separate wing of Boatwright Memorial Library.

The exhibit is open weekdays 9 a.m.–noon and 1 p.m.–4:30 p.m.

GRANTS NIH funds Telang's Mosquito research

Dr. Aparna Telang, assistant professor of biology, has received a two-year, $265,656 grant from the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases at the National Institutes of Health (NIH).

The NIH grant will support research titled "Nutritional and Endocrine Control of Mosquito Egg Development."

"Mosquitoes are major vectors of pathogens that cause human diseases," Telang explains. "My research focuses on nutritional physiology because the ability of mosquitoes to grow, develop, and successfully produce eggs is nutrient limited."

The NIH grant will fund summer research for Telang and several undergraduate students, including lab support, equipment, supplies, and travel. "Students collaborating with me should expect to gain skills in organism biology, biochemistry, physiology, and molecular biology," Telang says.

Chemistry professors land NSF grant

Dr. Lisa Gentile, associate professor of chemistry, and Dr. Jonathan Dattelbaum, assistant professor of chemistry, have been awarded a three-year, $309,737 grant from the National Science Foundation.

They will use the money to purchase three instruments—a differential scanning calorimeter, an isothermal titration calorimeter, and a time-resolved fluorometer.

Richmond faculty and students will be the primary users of the equipment, but the University also will share the instruments with faculty from Hampton University, Virginia State University, and Randolph-Macon College.

STAFF

Schuyler and Breeden join president's office

Dr. Lori Gates Schuyler has been appointed chief of staff to President Ed Ayers, and Ann Lloyd Breeden has been named secretary to the Board of Trustees.

Schuyler will advise Ayers on policy decisions, work with members of the president's cabinet to ensure implementation and tracking of university's goals and objectives, and serve as Ayers' representative.

Schuyler previously was assistant dean and lecturer in history at the University of Virginia's College and Graduate School of Arts and Sciences. Her recent book, The Weight of Their Votes: Southern Women and Political Leverage in the 1920s, won honorable mention in the 2007 Virginia Literary Awards. It also claimed the Julia Cherry Spruill Prize for the best book on Southern women's history for 2006.

Breeden's primary role will be to support the work of the board and act as a liaison between it and the University community. A Richmond native, she previously served

Afghan student picks UR

Wadia Samadi, '11, was two years old in 1991 when civil war broke out in Kabul, Afghanistan. The sky rained rocket-propelled grenades as she and her family fled the country.

"It was just by luck that anyone made it out without getting killed," she says.

Samadi is the third student to enroll in Richmond through the Initiative to Educate Afghan Women, a national program giving Afghan women the opportunity to pursue higher education in the United States.

Samadi is the first valedictorian of the International School of Kabul, but her formal education began in a refugee camp in Pakistan. Her family moved several times during middle and high school years, but her father always emphasized the importance of education. In 2002, Samadi and her family returned to Kabul.

As her family recovered from the financial hardships of refugee life, Samadi's father borrowed money for her to attend Kabul International Academy (later named the International School of Kabul).

The school is a potential Taliban target because it enrolls Americans and because it educates girls at the high school level. "They are known for burning schools and books," Samadi says.

Gail Goolsby, Samadi's principal and counselor, says young Afghan women, such as Samadi, must have strong support to continue their education.

"Her family, especially her dad, is most supportive of the children—including his daughters—completing as much education as they can," Goolsby says. "Wadia is a dedicated student, full of determination and academically strong."

At Richmond, Samadi plans to major in business. Upon completion of her undergraduate studies, the Initiative to Educate Afghan Women will require her to return to Afghanistan.

Lora Robins Gallery displays character jugs

Mugs and jugs come to life in the Lora Robins Gallery of Design From Nature in an exhibit called "Ceramic Portraits: Selections From the Georganna Yeager Johns Collection of Royal Doulton Character Jugs."

The people portrayed on the whimsical jugs range from Shakespearean characters and famous composers to Sherlock Holmes and the Beatles. The Lora Robins Gallery has more than 350 of the jugs in its permanent collection.

The free exhibit was curated by art history majors Nan Goff, '07, and Amanda Doss, '07, and it runs until June 29, 2008. For more

Inventing Leadership

Dr. Thomas Wren, professor of leadership studies, explores the tension between ruler and ruled in his latest book, Inventing Leadership: The Challenge of Democracy.

"Competing interpretations of this relationship lie at the bottom of much political discourse," he says.

Wren traces the emergence of rulers, sovereign nations, and leadership that vests power in the people. He concludes with a proposed model of leadership for a modern democratic world.

e-Suds cleans up UR's laundry

Digging up quarters and making repeated trips to the laundry room to check on washer and dryer loads are chores of the past for Richmond students.

A recent $75,000 project upgraded all campus laundry facilities to operate through e-Suds, an online laundry system. The system monitors availability and progress of machines, which students can check on the campus network.

Students who live on campus can swipe their identification cards to use the new machines. Other users still can deposit quarters. The system e-mails or text-messages students when each cycle finishes.

Gamma ray detector will be superscopic

Dr. Con Beausang, associate professor of physics, is working with scientists from the country to develop a new gamma ray detector called GRETINA, the first stage in developing GRETA, which stands for gamma ray energy tracking array.

The scientists plan to spend $50 million to produce GRETA, which will be 100 to 1,000 times more powerful than the United States' current gamma ray microscope, the Gammaphere.

Beausang and scientists from several other universities are collaborating on the project with colleagues at Lawrence Berkeley National Laboratory; Oak Ridge National Laboratory; Argonne National Laboratory; and the National Superconducting Cyclotron Laboratory.

When GRETINA is completed in 2012, it will rotate among the national laboratories, helping the world's leading physicists study the structure and properties of atomic nuclei by analyzing the gamma rays they emit when they are excited.

Beausang, who chairs UR's physics department, is one of eight scientists on the GRETINA Advisory committee. He has been involved in the project since its inception in 1997.

Thomas chalice discovered

About 120 years ago, the widow of James Thomas Jr. donated a silver chalice to the University that had belonged to her husband, the wealthy benefactor who saved Richmond College after the Civil War.

The chalice probably was displayed in the James Thomas Jr. Memorial Museum and Art Hall, an elaborate tribute to Thomas on the old downtown campus. When the University moved to the current campus in 1914, many treasures from the old museum were lost, but the chalice landed safely in the Rare Book Room of Boatwright Library.

The only record of the cup comes from Ann Fowle Rumble, W'75, who compiled an inventory of historical artifacts on campus in 1974. Soon after Rumble completed the list, however, the chalice disappeared.

Two years ago, Karl Rhodes, editor of Richmond Alumni Magazine, found Rumble's description of the chalice in the University archives and started looking for the cup. Rumble remembered doing the inventory, but she had no idea what happened to the chalice. Neither did anyone else.

"It was weird," Rhodes says. "We were looking for something from 1853 that had completely vanished from the University's institutional memory—except for Ann's inventory."

The search continued until Rhodes received an e-mail in October from Jeff Evans, president of Green Valley Auctions. Evans had read about James Thomas in the magazine and wondered if the University would be interested in a chalice that had belonged to the 19th century tobacco magnate.

The cup was mixed in among the personal possessions of Stuart Wheeler, associate professor of classical studies, who died in 2006 after teaching at the University for nearly 40 years. Green Valley Auctions has returned it to the University archives, and it is on display at the Virginia Baptist Historical Society adjacent to Boatwright Library.

Richmond Alumni Magazine continues to look for artifacts from the old museum. Join the treasure hunt by visiting magazine.richmond.edu/treasure, or contact Rhodes at (804) 289-8059 or krhodes@richmond.edu.

SPIDER SPORTS

BASKETBALL

Coaches anticipate pivotal seasons

Men's basketball coach Chris Mooney and women's basketball coach Michael Shafer are both in their third years at Richmond.

Mooney inherited a team with no guards and only seven scholarship players in 2005-06. Shafer took over a squad that had lost five seniors after making the NCAA tournament the previous year. Both teams finished with 13-17 records.

In 2006-07, the coaches started as many as four freshmen at a time. The men's team relied on four rookies for most of its scoring.

The women's team had three first-year players among its top six scorers.

"Our experience will be invaluable compared to last year," Mooney says. "Bringing in a big class of freshmen and making them responsible for winning and losing games was difficult."

In 2007-08, both teams will have some senior experience—Christina

Nikita Thomas, '10, represents an experienced sophomore class.

Campion for the women, Gaston Moliva and Oumar Sylla for the men—along with sophomore classes loaded with experience.

"It is a program, it's not a year-by-year patchwork," Shafer says. "Let's build our program so we get national respect. That's what we're trying to do."

Both coaches expect their programs to turn the corner this season. "We think we can improve dramatically," Mooney says. "The way things were when we inherited our programs made for very difficult situations. We're comfortable with building our programs. Last year was a step forward, and this year will be even more of a step."

The men's squad will host Virginia Tech in the Robins Center on Jan. 3 in a game televised nationally on CSTV. The Spiders will play key Atlantic 10 home games against Dayton (Jan. 26), Temple (Feb. 6), Saint Louis (Feb. 10), Charlotte (Feb. 20), and UMass (March 1).

The women's team hosts national power Notre Dame on Jan. 2. Key conference home games include Temple (Jan. 23), Saint Joseph's (Feb. 16), and George Washington (Feb. 27).

"We've got to do something special," Shafer says. "We have enough talent to [secure] a bye in the Atlantic 10 tournament. ... That is one of our goals, along with winning 20 games and getting back to postseason play. Those are all reasonable expectations for us this year."

Coach Chris Mooney instructs David Gonzalvez, '10.

Spider offense smashes records

Head coach Dave Clawson predicted that his offensive players would be better this year, but no one expected them to rewrite the Richmond record books.

In their second game of the season, the Spider offense set a single-game record by moving the ball 642 yards in a 49-14 win over Northeastern. In the following game, tailback Tim Hightower, '08, broke Richmond's single-game rushing record by rambling 295 yards in a 41-14 victory over Bucknell.

Hightower scored four touchdowns in each of those games, and he added four the ball 1,664 total yards—nearly one mile—in those games. Quarterback Eric Ward, '10, passed for 604 yards, half of them to wide receiver Kevin Grayson, '10.

Those incredible offensive statistics do not include kickoff return yards, which played a key role in the team's win over New Hampshire. Justin Rogers, '10, broke Richmond's single-game record by returning five kick-offs for a total of 222 yards. One of those returns went 85 yards for a touchdown.

Richmond continued to move the ball well in a heartbreaking 23-21 loss to Towson, but the offense failed to convert yards into points on several possessions.

That was not a problem the following week against Stony Brook. The Spiders scored 42 points with only 325 yards of total offense. In sharp contrast, Stony Brook moved the ball 339 yards but did not score.

Hightower continued to etch his name deeper into the Richmond record books during the Stony Brook game by breaking the single-season record for rushing touchdowns. At the mid-point of the season, he had rushed for 14 touchdowns and more than 1,000 yards.

At press time, the Spiders had won five games in a row, including a 62-56 victory over Delaware in five overtimes to claim the CAA South title.

High praise for Hightower

Tim Hightower, '08, knew he was faster, but opposing teams never saw him coming. In the second game of the season, the Richmond running back burned Northeastern by rushing for 246 yards and four touchdowns.

"He showed an ability to accelerate in the open field that I don't remember him having last season," said Northeastern coach Rocky Hager.

In the next game, Hightower blistered Bucknell with a school-record 295 rushing yards and four more touchdowns.

"We couldn't tackle him," said Bucknell coach Tim Landis.

Hightower's quick start yielded back-to-back National Offensive Player of the Week Awards, but the Waldorf, Md., native was quick to share the glory.

"The biggest thing is being able to help the team win," Hightower said. The school record "is a dream come true, but I'm really fortunate to have an offensive line like I do. They work as hard as anybody."

The 6-1, 225-pound tailback got better by working closely with Richmond's strength and conditioning coach, Brandon Hourigan, during the past two seasons and off-seasons.

"This wasn't something that happened overnight," Hightower says. "You can't train speed in two months. ... I just focused on areas where I needed improvement and did them over and over."

In previous years, Hightower's longest run was 54 yards. In the first half of the 2007 campaign, he blazed past defenses for runs of 90, 72, 67, 57, and 52 yards—all ending in touchdowns.

At mid-season, his name surfaced among leading candidates for the Walter Payton Award, which goes to the best offensive player in the Division I Championship Subdivision.

Eric Ward, '10, spots an open receiver.

more in the team's next game, a thrilling 45-38 decision over nationally ranked New Hampshire.

In a phenomenal three-game stretch, Hightower scored 12 touchdowns and rushed for 709 yards. The Richmond offense moved

Higher Ed

President Ed Ayers brings passion and energy to his 'joyful' new job.

By Bill Lohmann, R'79

After a full day of meeting and greeting and being president, Ed Ayers cuts through the backyard of the President's House, book bag over his shoulder, broad smile on his face. "How are you folks?" he offers cheerfully to his wife, Abby, and a visitor on the patio. He slows long enough to take off his jacket and give Abby a kiss. Then he hurries downstairs to the basement, where a dozen first-year students wait for him.

They are five minutes early for Ayers' class on "The Southern Past," his academic specialty and professional passion.

"Just can't wait to get that knowledge!" says a grinning Ayers, as he unpacks his laptop and settles in for an evening of gentle critiquing, purposeful banter, and jovial illumination served with a slice or two of Domino's pizza. (Ed and Abby always provide dinner.)

"If you had been to the first meeting of this class, you would have heard very little laughter or talking at all," says Michael Rogers, '11, a student from Tyler, Texas. He and the rest of the class had no warning that the president would be their professor.

Ayers chats with students' family members during Family Weekend.

"We were definitely intimidated," Rogers recalls, but "he has won us over in lots of ways and allows us to make fun of him as long as he can do the same to us ... and we learn in the process. He is passionate about teaching and that passion is contagious."

Ayers has the rare ability to charm and disarm with his self-effacing humor. He pokes fun at the Appalachian accent he proudly retains.

"I don't want to overplay that," he says of his east Tennessee upbringing. "I mean, I went to Yale, and I've been at U.Va. for 26 years."

At Virginia, his classes typically generated long waiting lists. His farewell lecture in Charlottesville was a big event. An overflow crowd packed Old Cabell Hall and gave him a standing ovation. He wove together history, philosophy, and personal anecdotes, tying a bow on his U.Va. career.

Even as he tackles his new assignment at UR, with a schedule packed with campus meetings, community events, and alumni receptions, Ayers remains rooted in teaching. He loves history and working with students. He also admits a fondness for being the center of attention.

"My mother was a 5th-grade teacher and my dad was a used-car salesman," Ayers says with a smile. "Put them together, and you got me."

ETERNALLY OPTIMISTIC

Ayers' U.Va. colleagues describe him as relentless—on the job and on the basketball court. He is "a perpetual motion machine," says Brian Balogh, associate professor of history and a regular in pickup games at Ayers' home in Charlottesville.

"Nobody wants to guard him because we are old guys and can't afford to rack up so much mileage in such a short time," Balogh says. "Ed is eternally optimistic. No game is ever out of reach for him, no comeback unlikely."

Ayers, 54, already has had a basketball goal installed in the parking area next to the President's House.

He never aspired to be a university president. He was too busy teaching (U.S. Professor of the Year), writing books (finalist for the National Book Award and the Pulitzer Prize), and finding innovative ways to bring history to a wider audience, such as his digital archive, "The Valley of the Shadow: Two Communities in the American Civil War."

"I had these two competing ambitions," Ayers recalls. "One was to write books that matter, and the other was to make a difference in the place I live. Those two things are generally not able to be reconciled."

He cut back on his writing somewhat after U.Va. promoted him to dean of the College and Graduate School of Arts and Sciences in 2001. He was suddenly in charge of 10,000 students, 700 faculty members, and a $160 million budget.

Ayers had never even been a department chairman, but he proved to be an excellent appointment. He dealt with a severe budget deficit, making painful decisions, yet preserving goodwill by "being transparent and objective in his distribution of resources," says Dr. Charles F. Irons, an assistant professor of history at Elon University, and one of Ayers' students at the time.

"He's genuine," says Irons, "but that doesn't mean the wheels aren't always turning."

Ayers also proved capable of raising money to fund a $105 million construction project that was the most ambitious on U.Va.'s central grounds in a century, dislocating friends from their parking spaces in the process. "Perhaps," he jokes, "it was a good time to get the heck out of Dodge."

WHY STICKS KEBOB?

When Richmond called him last year, Ayers was scheduled to teach at Oxford in 2008–09 and then return to Charlottesville as dean.

During his tenure at U.Va., Ayers routinely turned down job offers and side-stepped search firms. He did not want to uproot his family or leave U.Va., but as a favor to a friend, he had lunch with Richmond Trustee Robert L. Burrus Jr., R'55 and H'05, who chaired the presidential search committee.

Ayers liked what he heard, talked it over with Abby and a close friend, and decided within hours that the job made sense for him. He agreed to meet again with Burrus and fellow search committee members Robert “Bob” Jepson Jr., B'64, GB'75, and H'87, and Rec-tor George Welde Jr., B'74. Ayers picked one of his favorite places as the meeting spot, the Sticks Kebob Shop in Charlottesville.

Why Sticks Kebob? “Just to let them know what I'm like,” Ayers says.

Dressed in suits, the four men sat at a table on a Friday afternoon and talked about higher ed. They drank limeade or lemonade. (Historical accounts conflict on this.)

“It certainly wasn't luxurious,” says Burrus with a laugh. “There were no white tablecloths.” But the conversation was productive.

“It was his philosophy toward higher education,” Burrus says of Ayers, “but also his personal demeanor, the fact he's very straightforward, says what's on his mind.”

Toward the end of their meeting, a Sticks Kebob customer stopped by their table to tell the group what was on his mind.

“He comes over and says, ‘You know, you guys look like you're getting ready to deny somebody a mortgage,’” Ayers recalls. “Everybody just laughed. I began to feel, ‘This is OK. They see who I am ... somebody who feels working in higher education is such a joyful job.’”

APPALACHIAN ROOTS

Ayers was born in Asheville, N.C., and his family moved to Kingsport, Tenn. when he was 3. His parents took shift jobs at Kingsport Press. Eventually, his mother went to college and became an elementary school teacher. A strike drove his father out of the printing business and into used-car sales.

“He could talk better than anyone I ever knew, with jokes and cussing and logic deployed in just the right measure for his audience,” Ayers wrote in What Caused the Civil War? Reflections of the South and Southern History.

Ayers was struck by how revered his mother was among her students—the gifts, the notes, the hugs—which might have been his first inclination toward education as a career. His appreciation of history would come much later.

The “most memorable place” of his childhood was the home of his paternal grandparents in the mountains of western North Carolina. On visits there, he developed a deep connection to his Appalachian roots. He played in the creek, walked the fields, explored every corner of the barn, and sang hymns in his grandmother's church.

“I didn't know what to do with it,” Ayers wrote about his feeling for the place, “so I held it close to my heart.”

Back in Kingsport, he grew up engaged in Scouts, cars, and rock music. In high school, he worked at a bookstore and read publications such as Rolling Stone, becoming enthralled with popular culture. He read that writer Tom Wolfe, a Richmonder, earned a degree in American studies from Yale. He wrote a paper on Dylan Thomas because he read that Bob Dylan named himself after the Welsh poet.

Ayers' books reflect his passion for Southern history.

From the top: Ayers backpacks in New Hampshire, poses with Abby, mans the double Ferris wheel, and enjoys some family time.

He also thought he wanted to be a journalist. He edited his high school newspaper and wrote for the local daily. He enrolled at the University of Tennessee, where he encountered Richard Marius, a young professor of American studies.

"He was from east Tennessee, had gone to Tennessee ... and Yale, had written two novels, had this cool thing with his hair," Ayers recalls. "I thought, 'I want to be this guy.'"

NO CARNIES ALLOWED

Ayers decided he would apply to Yale for graduate school. In the meantime, he worked a summer with a traveling carnival, crossing the Mason-Dixon Line for the first time and exploring the Northeast.

He helped erect, repair, and dismantle the 110-foot-tall double Ferris wheel, climbing on it as though it were a giant jungle gym. He also operated the ride, cranking up the Doobie Brothers and Steppenwolf to please the customers and himself. He slept in an old station wagon adorned with homemade curtains and cushions from his family's outdoor furniture.

"We'd roll into towns and signs would say, 'No carnies allowed,'" he recalls. "It was miserable, but what a life experience. It made me think being a professor looked pretty good."

Armed with a bachelor's degree in American studies, Ayers took a job stapling boxes in a heater factory. He despised it almost as much as his next job—working in the repossession department of a tire store.

Before going to Yale for graduate school, he held one more job: running a youth center in Johnson City, Tenn. In addition to creating a safe place for troubled kids, he got a taste of his future work, persuading merchants to donate doughnuts and ping-pong tables.

"I just realized," he says with a smile, "I was doing development work."

And he wasn't doing it alone. Abby, while completing her graduate work in child development, helped him paint the center and put on dances. And when the time came, she accompanied him north to Yale.

SOUTHERN HISTORIAN

Ed and Abby both grew up in Kingsport, but they did not meet until friends introduced them at the University of Tennessee. Their early dates were in the school cafeteria and at Pizza Hut. For their honeymoon, they camped on Mount Desert Island in Maine.

One of the first things Abby did after moving into the President's House was to put in an herb garden. She plans to start a vegetable garden next year and hopes to transform the foyer of the house into a gallery to display artwork by members of the UR community. Abby loves doing things with her hands: arts, crafts, photography, cooking, and working in the yard at the family's home in Albemarle County, where Ed still finds it restful to mow the grass and whack the honeysuckle.

"We blazed our own trails ... and did all the landscaping," Abby says of the three-acre property that backs up to a mountain.

During the Yale years, Abby taught preschool, putting food on the table while Ed worked on his graduate studies.

"I never considered myself a Southerner until I went up there," Abby says. "It was funny. People would want to hear us talk and that sort of thing."

While at Yale, Ed discovered the history of common folk. History was no longer a dreary study of dead people—as he had always considered it—but the story of living people, viewed from their perspective as events transpired around them. He signed up for the last class taught by C. Vann Woodward, the most eminent of Southern historians, and Ed began to view his home region in a new light.

"I slowly became a historian," says Ayers, who would accept a teaching position at U.Va. in 1980.

A NEW ADVENTURE

For his dissertation on Southern crime and prisons, Ed and Abby traveled throughout the South one summer, doing research and sleeping in a tent. They spent as much time as possible in air-conditioned libraries and other public buildings before returning at night to whichever sweltering campground they were calling home.

The experience did not dampen their enthusiasm for the outdoors.

Ayers believes education is "the great good in American life ... the great vehicle for personal happiness and social progress."

Hiking, biking, and camping have been favorite pastimes as they raised their children, Nate, 26, and Hannah, 21.

One of Nate's favorite memories is a 50-mile bike trip he took with his dad in California. "We had a great time, plus it was great that we shared something that I was, and still am, passionate about," says Nate, who graduated in 2005 from Virginia Commonwealth University with a degree in kinetic imaging.

Hannah, a senior at the College of William and Mary majoring in history and French, fondly recalls a cross-country family trip when her dad passed the time by teaching her rock music history.

"By the end of the trip, I was able to name which Beatle sang which song and identify many of the other classic bands," she recalls.

Over the years, Abby has taught preschool and elementary school, but mostly she has been a full-time mom. Among her work in the community, she volunteered for Play Partners, a Charlottesville program that promotes early literacy skills among children in child-care centers. She hopes to bring that program to Richmond.

The move to Richmond represents a new adventure for the family, Abby says, a chance to "shake things up a bit" and "start a new chapter in our life."

She is still adjusting to caterers, florists, receptions, and the echoes in the vast President's House when she issues the call for dinner.

"This is all totally new," she says. "Everyone has been very kind and welcoming. You nonchalantly mention something, and the next day somebody's here to do it or bring it to you or whatever. It's been very nice. ... If I want to work in the dirt, I'll have to fight these guys off."

'THAT'S MY DREAM'

The Richmond faithful ask Ayers about his vision for the University, and he responds with a question: "What do you want the University to be known for?"

"I know I shouldn't end a sentence with a preposition," he quickly adds, "but that just seems like the best way to say it."

And he says it over and over—to alumni, students, faculty, staff, and members of the broader Richmond community.

"I know this sounds trite, but there really is an art to listening to other people ... and Ed is really good at that," says Dr. Gregg D. Kimball, director of publications and education services at the Library of Virginia and another of Ayers' former students.

"He is incredibly nice ... but he's a very rigorous scholar, and his seminars are intense," Kimball says. "There can be some strong differences of opinion and debate there, but he's one of those people who can do that in such a way that's not personal."

Dr. Gary Gallagher, a friend and colleague of Ayers at U.Va., says Ayers' ability to connect with different audiences has served him well as a historian and will be just as beneficial as president.

"Universities are closed communities in many ways, and it's important that people step out and try to reach a broader audience. That's one of Ed's great strengths," Gallagher says. "He really enjoys doing it, and that's one reason he's so good at it."

At his first staff meeting, Ayers said, "Folks, this is supposed to be fun. We have to tackle some tough stuff, but the general attitude should be, 'I can't believe we get to do this work.'"

Ayers believes education is "the great good in American life ... the great vehicle for personal happiness and social progress." He believes UR can serve students from the best prep schools in New England and students from struggling high schools in rural Virginia.

"That's my dream: Put the two together and everybody will benefit," he says. "That's how sappy I am. I really do believe this." ✱

If Walrath wants to see the New York skyline, he has to leave his office and head for the roof.

THE Liberal Arts OF THE DEAL

English major Michael Walrath, '97, sells his fledgling Internet company to Yahoo for $720 million.

By Pamela Babcock

Early in his sophomore year, Michael Walrath, '97, received a puzzling notice from the University. All Richmond students, it said, would be getting e-mail accounts.

Walrath had a vague sense that people were using the Internet to communicate, but he did not own a computer, and he had no idea what he would do with e-mail. He was too focused on English literature to pay much attention to the latest computer fad.

He was majoring in English because he liked it. "It just came naturally to me, this discourse and analysis," he recalls. College was "exploratory and experiential." He gave little thought to what career he might pursue after college, but he pretty much ruled out anything related to business.

"I knew Richmond had a great business school, and I probably could have found it on a map," he recalls. "But I come from a long line of teachers and artists. The Wall Street Journal wasn't a fixture in our house growing up. ... I always thought business was dry and boring."

Ten years after graduation, many of his classmates were stunned by headlines in The Wall Street Journal and other national business publications. Michael Walrath—the guy who avoided business classes and thrived on English literature—had sold his Internet company to Yahoo for hundreds of millions of dollars.

People who had not contacted him in years sent e-mails saying, "Holy cow! I can't believe what you've been doing!"

UR TOUCH POINTS

Walrath grew up in Brookfield, Conn., where he developed a strong work ethic early in life. He landed his first job at 14, working at The Village Store, a small-town market where he made the coffee and did odd jobs. He graduated from Brookfield High School and enrolled in Richmond.

"I just fell in love with the whole place, even before I went to school there," Walrath reflects. "There are a lot of Richmond touch points in my life." Chief among them is his wife, Michelle O'Donoghue Walrath, W'98. He recognized her at a party during his sophomore year as someone who worked at the gym he frequented. They learned how to use e-mail together in the computer lab, and they married in 2000.

Walrath's first real job after college was promoting Reebok shoes at sporting events around the country. It was fun, and it got him interested in running and fitness. He next worked at two New York Sports Clubs in Connecticut, where he did personal training and managed the personal training staff.

In 1999, his career swerved into selling online advertising for DoubleClick. "The only qualification I had was some sales skills," he recalls. But for the next four years, Walrath immersed himself in the industry, rising to director of direct marketing at DoubleClick, then senior vice president of strategy and development at MaxWorldwide.

By then, the overheated Internet industry was melting down, but the experience gave Walrath the opportunity to see a company go through lots of reorganization and adaptation.

"It was business school for me," he recalls. "I got to start some businesses and operate some businesses that very few companies would have allowed a 25-year-old to do."

GO FOR IT

In January 2003, Walrath decided he no longer wanted to work for someone else. He sat down with his wife, Michelle, and discussed the idea of starting a consulting business.

"There would never have been a Right Media if Michelle hadn't encouraged me to do it," he recalls. "We had two kids under 3 and not much savings in the bank, and I was talking about walking away from a really good job for total uncertainty, ... but she never hesitated at all. She ... just said, 'Go for it.' We'll find a way to make it work."

"Maybe I could have done better if I were a technologist. But if I were a technologist, I probably would have had to find someone with the vision and the marketing focus."

There was no real business plan and no expectation they would sell the company for $720 million just four years later, but he quit his job at MaxWorldwide and struck out on his own.

He launched Right Media in a 10-by-10-foot storage closet that a friend let him use for a few hundred bucks a month. The closet was half full of desks, but Walrath moved in and started making phone calls.

"I'm a free agent," he announced. "Do you have any work you need to get done?"

The country had just weathered the nuclear winter of Internet advertising, but Walrath believed it would recover. Too much time and money was being spent on the Internet for online advertising not to thrive, he reasoned. The industry was inefficient, but he had some novel ideas about how to make it run smoother.

As it evolved from a consulting business into a technology company, Right Media turned Walrath's ideas into a virtual marketplace where online advertisers and Web site publishers buy and sell advertising. The system is similar to eBay, a real-time auction that is fast, efficient, and transparent.

The company found some angel investors among former DoubleClick customers who kicked in a couple hundred thousand dollars. Two years later, Right Media raised $12 million in venture capital from Redpoint Ventures and continued to ramp up operations.

Last fall, Yahoo bought 20 percent of Right Media and acquired the rest of the business this summer. Today, the company employs about 230 people in New York, London, Moscow, San Francisco, Eugene, Ore., and Tallahassee, Fla.

THE 'IT' FACTOR

The common misperception is that Internet entrepreneurs come from high-tech backgrounds, but many do not. Sometimes their success has little to do with technology and everything to do with recognizing a great opportunity and pursuing it passionately. That's what Walrath did.

"Working in the technology space doesn't mean you have to write lines of code," says Christine Hunsicker, Right Media's vice president of business operations and a key partner in the business since its beginning.

Hunsicker, who majored in English literature at Princeton, says

Walrath's entrepreneurial instincts are "incredibly smart." He hired technology experts and did not second-guess them. He tolerated "lots of mistakes" and supported aggressive risk-taking.

"People assume that to be the CEO of a company like this you have to be a technologist," Walrath says. "How does English prepare you for this?" he ponders. "This is very science-based, algorithm-based. We're talking 60,000 to 70,000 [transactions] per second in real time."

"Maybe I could have done better if I were a technologist," he continues. "But if I were a technologist, I probably would have had to find someone with the vision and the marketing focus."

At Richmond, Walrath learned how to absorb information, analyze it, and articulate it. That's how his English major prepared him. "He believes in everything he talks about," Hunsicker says, "and it comes across powerfully."

Yes, but it's more than that, says longtime friend Rob Johnson, '97, a fraternity brother in Pi Kappa Alpha. "Things always seem to fall into place for the guy. I used to think he was just lucky. However, after witnessing a pattern of accomplishments, I have concluded that he just has 'it,' that rare set of intangible qualities possessed by the truly successful."

OPT FOR THE PARTY

Walrath's office does not offer impressive views of the hustle and bustle of New York. His view consists of whiteboards scrawled with algorithms.

The office contains no business or computer books, but it does have a few novels that Walrath reads on the Long Island commuter train. Two books are close at hand—Cloud At- las and War and Peace. His enthusiasm for Cloud Atlas equals—perhaps exceeds—his excitement over the $720 million Yahoo deal.

"Have you read it?" he asks. "It's really good."

A cardboard box sits unopened on the floor. Walrath has moved this box eight or nine times in the past seven years without unpacking it. So his office is sparse. A stuffed toy cheetah stares out from a shelf, and a dodge ball trophy sits nearby.

The rest of Right Media's Park Avenue headquarters reflects Walrath's and his company's personality—low key and eclectic.

Thirty-something employees, including Walrath, show up for work toting backpacks. They have decorated their partitioned work areas with tiki torches, putting greens, disco balls, and red leather sofas. Conference rooms are named after cereal brands, such as Honey-Comb Walrath enjoys reading, writing, playing with his kids, and throwing dodgeballs at lawyers.

Walrath works about 60 hours a week but tries not to spend "crazy hours" in the office. He likes to be home when the kids wake up and before they go to sleep. The Yahoo deal might buy him more time with Michelle and the kids, but he also wants to perfect the Right Media model.

"The deal with Yahoo is not an outcome. It's a milestone," he insists. "We have ambitious goals about finishing what we started." But Walrath is willing to contemplate life after Internet advertising. "I want to do stuff that's meaningful, and at some point, way down the road, I might find there are other things that I should be spending my time and attention on."

As a Richmond student, Walrath made a pledge to himself to write a book. He has not kept that promise yet, but his life is unfolding like a novel by Dickens or Wolfe or Fitzgerald.

"I am sure that when he makes that dream a reality, we will see his name on The New York Times best sellers list," says Johnson, his longtime friend and fraternity brother. "Hey, it's Walrath. Why not?"

As part of the Yahoo deal, Walrath dropped his CEO title and is now senior vice president. In other words, he has gone back to working for someone else.

"But I don't think it's sad," he says. "At one point, I compared it to sending your kid off to college. You recognize it's the best thing to do." When Walrath does send his children to college, he might advise them to study English, but he will not press the issue. After all, he is an English major who believes life should be the story of your own ideas. ★

"The deal with Yahoo is not an outcome. It's a milestone. We have ambitious goals about finishing what we started."

Right Media is more about substance than style, Hunsicker insists. Given a choice between trendy office space and celebratory team-building, "Right Media always opts for the party."

GETTING IT RIGHT

Right Media has plenty to celebrate these days. Inc. magazine recently ranked the business 43rd on its list of fastest-growing private companies in the United States. The company's revenue jumped from $1.3 million in 2003 to $34.8 million in 2006.

In June, Walrath won the Ernst & Young Entrepreneur of the Year Award for digital media in the New York metropolitan area. He received the award at a fancy fete in Times Square surrounded by his entire family.

"It was great to be nominated and to have all these people come," Walrath recalls. "The other two guys who were nominated with me I know very well. It was nice to win, but it was cool just to be nominated."

Walrath is quick to credit his employees and his family for Right Media's success. He comes from a close-knit clan that never pressured him to become "a productive of 'Do you have a job that pays well?'" Walrath recalls. What mattered to them was the intrinsic value of what he was doing—not necessarily the market value.

"That was always where the bar was set for me and where I have set the bar for myself," he says. While outsiders marvel over Right Media's eye-popping price tag, Walrath and his employees remain focused on making the right decisions for the company and its customers. "That's why the company is named Right Media."

Efficiency, fairness, and innovation are the core principals of the business, he explains. "What are we doing that makes the market work better? ... My dad or my mom or some other relative is always sitting on my shoulder saying, 'What are you doing that is worthwhile and making the world a better place?'"

NOT AN OUTCOME

Walrath picks up a framed photograph of his children—Riley, 6, Michael, 5, and Patrick, 3. He stares at it for a moment and quickly puts it down. "This is why travel stinks," he says.

Going Green

Richmond steps up efforts to protect the environment.

By Melanie Mayhew, '05

As colleges and universities lead the national movement to "go green," Richmond's students, faculty, staff, and alumni are making environmental protection a high priority.

"The University of Richmond, so remarkable for its beautiful physical setting, has worked hard to be a responsible steward," says President Ed Ayers. "We will continue to look for ways to innovate and to adapt the best strategies others devise."

For many years, Richmond has recycled paper and used energy-saving light bulbs. More recently, the University has expanded its environmental efforts to touch nearly every aspect of campus life.

Richmond graduated its first environmental studies majors in 2003, and opened its first "green building" in 2004. Last summer, the Virginia Department of Environmental Quality certified the University's dining facilities as a Virginia Green Restaurant. And in September, Richmond activated a baghouse that eliminates 98 percent of particulate emissions from its coal-fired steam plant.

By going green, the University hopes to make the campus even more attractive to prospective students. "It's not just a marketing ploy," Ayers says. "It's the right thing to do."

GREEN BUILDINGS

Richmond demonstrated a growing commitment to the environment in 2004, when it opened Weinstein Hall, an academic building that became the second LEED-certified structure among all Virginia universities. LEED stands for leadership in energy and environmental design, national standards for the design, construction, and operation of green buildings.

The LEED program promotes a "whole-building" approach to sustainability by setting standards in five areas: site development, water conservation, energy efficiency, materials selection, and indoor environmental quality.

Jason Levinn, '08, founder of Richmond Environmental Network for Economic Willpower, applauds green construction projects such as Lakeview Residence Hall, where debris is separated for recycling.

From the left: A CO₂ monitoring system improves air quality in Weinstein Hall. Cinderblocks and paper await recycling. The roof of the Weinstein Center for Recreation University Architect Andrew McBride has registered four additional projects with the U.S. Green Building Council, including Heilman Dining Center, Weinstein Center for Recreation and Wellness, Lakeview Residence Hall, and Freeman Hall. The University also will seek LEED certification for other projects in the planning stages, he says.

Green construction costs more, but it will help the University attract students who are environmentally conscious, says Richard Harrison, B'84. Harrison, and his wife, Susan, recently donated $500,000 to the Robins School of Business to help the University follow U.S. Green Building Council standards on the 33,000-square-foot expansion. The Harrisons funded their donation with gains from investments in green technologies.

"As we continue to build new buildings or redevelop existing buildings, we need to reduce our carbon footprint," Harrison says. "It's about adding a little more to the secret sauce in attracting students to the University by taking a more proactive role and raising awareness."

GREEN GARBAGE

Although there is no government mandate to recycle in Virginia, Richmond has made it a priority, says John Hoogakker, associate vice president for facilities. In addition to common recyclables—such as paper, plastic, and aluminum—the University recycles cinderblocks, tires, batteries, carpet, electronic equipment, and cooking oil.

Last year, UR recycled nearly 1.1 million pounds of material, says Al Lane, manager of custodial and environmental services.

At the end of each school year, campus chapters of the Sierra Club and Habitat for Humanity collect of e-waste in three days by inviting the community to bring items to campus.

"The line of cars from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturday was nonstop, bumper to bumper," says Wendy Burchard, a staff member who managed the drive for UR. "Incredible!"

GREEN SCHOLARSHIP

The University started its environmental studies program in 2000, and more students are showing interest in the new major each year, says Chris Stevenson, associate professor of chemistry and coordinator of the program.

Ellis M. West, professor of political science and one of the program's founders, is encouraged by the program's growth, but he wants the University to do a better job of practicing what it preaches. He recommends hiring an administrator to champion sustainability with the same zeal that Dr. Uliana Gabara has brought to international education during the past 20 years.

The reason international education has succeeded, he says, "is that the University—from the very highest level on down—made a very clear and strong commitment to promoting it."

The University took a step in that direction in 2003, when former President William Cooper signed the Talloires Declaration. The 10-point agreement obliges its signatories to promote environmental sustainability by example and by educating others.

University Architect Andrew McBride has registered five campus projects with the U.S. Green Building Council.

and resell discarded or donated student property. The project generates thousands of dollars for their organizations, and keeps the items out of landfills.

In October, Richmond partnered with Hollins University, Old Dominion University, and Virginia Tech to collect electronic waste and send it to a recycling plant in Massachusetts. Richmond alone collected an estimated 250,000 pounds Efficiency reflects sunlight to save energy. Charging stations promote electric and hybrid vehicles, and a new baghouse cleans emissions from the coal-fired steam plant.

Previously, the University had approved a master plan that created a University-wide environmental awareness group that monitors and reports on UR's progress toward sustainability.

GREEN GRUB

The Virginia Department of Environmental Quality recently certified Richmond's campus dining facilities as a Virginia Green Restaurant. To earn certification, the dining services team recycles glass bottles, minimizes Student Jason Levinn, '08, applauds that improvement, but he notes the plant's inability to filter carbon dioxide. "We contribute to global warming right in our backyard," he says.

Levinn founded Richmond Environmental Network for Economic Willpower (RENEW) in fall 2006, a few months after viewing Al Gore's documentary, An Inconvenient Truth.

"It opened my eyes to global warming and climate change, not

GREEN LEADERSHIP

Faculty members—particularly in environmental studies—are adding their voices to RENEW and other student organizations that are calling for greater sustainability. (See Vantage Point on page 48.)

"We need to commit to how we're going to reduce our CO₂ emissions," says West, who suggests building bike paths and promoting car pools for starters. "It's a matter of leadership."

The University has a real opportunity to make a name for itself in the green-campus movement, agrees Dr. Mary Finley-Brook, assistant professor of geography. "We're training future leaders, so in helping the University become greener, we're giving students the tools they need" to save the planet. ☼ disposable products, eliminates Styrofoam-based containers for take-out and leftover food, recycles cooking oil, and conserves water.

Elsewhere on campus, sustainability efforts include switching to smaller utility service trucks, using alternative fuel for vehicles, and installing energy-efficient washers and dryers in residence halls.

In September, the University added a $6.5 million baghouse to the coal-fired steam plant that supplies heating, cooling, and hot water to buildings on campus. The baghouse employs hundreds of vacuum bags that clean the smoke generated from burning coal. They reduce the plant's particulate emissions by 98 percent.

only to the problems, but also to the solutions," says Levinn, of Gladstone, N.J. "It changed my perspective."

One of the first tasks for RENEW was to collect signatures on a petition requesting energy-efficient buildings on campus. This year, the group is encouraging President Ayers to sign the American College and University Presidents Climate Commitment, a pledge to make the campus "climate neutral" as soon as possible.

Richmond has been using energy-saving light bulbs of various types for years.

Students top alumni in ice hockey game

The UR Ice Hockey Club hosted its third annual alumni weekend in September with more than 20 former players returning to Richmond.

The student-alumni game was "the obvious highlight of the weekend," says Chris Bernard, '04, founder of the club. Taylor Hastings, '08, broke a 6-6 tie in a shootout to secure the win for the students. Matt Curtin, '07, scored four goals for the alumni and was named the game's most valuable player.

"It was a lot of fun to be back out there playing again," says Greg Kfoury, '06. This weekend is a great chance for all of us to keep in touch with our past teammates, and see how the team is doing."

REUNION

Reunion Weekend: 3s and 8s are wild

If your class year ends in 3 or 8, make a special effort to reconnect with your classmates on campus April 11–13. If you would like to help plan your reunion, send an e-mail to reunionweekend@richmond.edu or call the alumni office at (804) 289-8030 or (800) 480-4774, option 8.

One highlight of Reunion Weekend will be the inauguration of Dr. Edward L. Ayers as the ninth president of the University on April 11.

For the latest information about Reunion Weekend, check the alumni Web site at UROnline.net.

UROnline is a password-protected Web site that connects alumni to the University and each other. In addition to providing online registration for Reunion Weekend, it carries the latest news from the University of Richmond Alumni Association.

BOOKS

Brilliance and Balderdash

Former UR Trustee Dale Patrick Brown, W'68 and G'78, has written Brilliance and Balderdash: Early Lectures at Cincinnati's Mercantile Library.

The book tells what happened when Ralph Waldo Emerson, Herman

Melville, Harriet Beecher Stowe, William Makepeace Thackeray, and other luminaries lectured at the library in the 19th and early 20th centuries.

Brown is the former president and CEO of Sive/Young & Rubicam, an advertising agency in Cincinnati.

AWARDS

Richmond honors alumni leaders

The University named Robert Burrus Jr., R'55 and H'05, Volunteer of the Year for his work on the Presidential Search Committee.

Other honorees included Lawrence Marsh, B'82 and GB'94, and Scott Jenkins, B'82, who were named Educational Fundraisers of the Year for helping their class raise more than $1 million as a 25-year reunion gift.

Joel Getis, R'88, received the Spinning the Spider Web Award for his work with the Northern Virginia Alumni Chapter, and Summer Gathercole Spencer, '97, won the Distinguished Young Graduate Award for assisting homeless and unemployed people in Washington, D.C.

Megan Cummings, '07, received the H. Gerald Quigg Student Ambassador Award for co-chairing the senior class giving committee last year. Her class set a new participation record of 68 percent.

The Big Question

We anticipate the spring semester with a renewed sense of optimism and a question posed by our new president: What do we want the University to be known for?

Dr. Edward Ayers is listening and learning how UR defines itself. He asks us to articulate the place we knew as students and the place we know as alumni, understanding that both have evolved.

By responding to Dr. Ayers, we are sharing our hopes and aspirations for what we could be, and reinforcing our commitment to the UR community. We are joined in this challenge by students, faculty, staff, and fellow alumni who celebrate UR's spirit in all that they do.

In particular, our faculty and students inspire us to use our Richmond education to its fullest potential. During fiscal 2006–07, UR faculty were awarded 51 research grants from private and government sources—totaling more than $4.2 million—to conduct research in science, business, law, and the humanities. Last year we had more students named Goldwater Scholars than MIT, and more than 50 percent of the Class of 2007 participated in a study abroad program at some point during their Richmond experience.

By forging stronger connections between students and alumni, we give back to the University that gave to us. As an alumni association, our focus this year is to welcome our newest members long before they graduate and engage current members in new ways. We will be visible on campus and active in our alumni chapters throughout the world. We will serve as resources to Richmond students who want career advice, job referrals, and a more personal connection to the more than 50,000 other people who share a commitment to the UR community ... including you.

HOMECOMING

Five Spider defenders crush Villanova's Angelo Babbaro in Richmond's homecoming game. The No. 11 Spiders beat the No. 23 Wildcats, 35-27, in a contest that featured seven lead changes. Tailback Tim Hightower, '08, ran for 187 yards, while quarterback Eric Ward, '09, passed for 178 yards. Eric McBride, '10, made 14 tackles, while Stephen Howell, '08, made nine tackles and an interception.

Margaret Forrer and her husband, Bradford Darling, are in their new home in Meredith, N.H. Please contact the alumni office if you would like their address.

Harold H. Purcell, husband of Virginia Omohundro Purcell, passed away on July 14, 2007. He and Virginia co-chaired our 40-year class reunion.

Marion Yancey Petroff and her daughter enjoyed a trip to North Carolina to visit Biltmore Gardens.

Martha Beam de Vos shared news of Eleanor Kindell Miller, who has moved into a new home in Tow, Texas. Her two daughters plan to relocate to homes on the same street when they retire. In May Eleanor, along with her daughter, Leslie, and son-in-law, visited Martha as they traveled to Virginia Tech for Leslie's daughter's graduation. She earned a master's degree. Westhampton Class Secretary

At the time of our phone conversation, Mildred Slavin Cordish was recovering from facial bruises from a fall. She was the only woman from our class who attended the Boatwright dinner. We extend our sympathy to her and her family on the death of her husband, Gabe, last June.

Gene Woodfin Steussy and her husband, Cal, live in Indiana and are in good health. With their five children and 12 grandchildren spread out in Indiana, Illinois, and California, they rely on phone calls, e-mail and visits to keep in touch. Their summer project was restoring the porch on Cal's grandparents' farmhouse in Wisconsin, which is on the registry of historical homes as the site of the first Swiss cheese factory in the United States. They no longer have a dairy herd, but the home is available to descendants as a vacation spot.

Ethne Flanagan Higginbotham is grateful to have a community college and senior center nearby. Having both her daughter and son in the area keeps her feeling secure in her little summer cottage. Her walking group and her book club also have been a tremendous support.

I wonder if Anne Shafer Carey got to Saratoga Springs, N.Y., with her daughter. Both of us planned to attend the horse races there the week after I talked to her. She still has five horses on her Connecticut farm and appreciates life with the help of her caregiver. Anne has five children and two grandchildren living in Arizona, North Carolina, and Massachusetts.

Jayne Mair Massie, our scholarship committee representative, reported that two Westhampton students were chosen to receive our class scholarship for 2007-08. Ann Winifred Barrows, '09, from Roanoke, Va., is majoring in biochemistry and planning to attend medical school. Carolyn Virginia Stenzel from Richmond is a senior majoring in history with a special interest in early childhood education. Please remember to contribute to our class scholarship so other worthy students will benefit in the future.

Just before the deadline for this issue, Ann Pavey Garrett called with news of two deaths in mid-August. We offer our condolences to LaVerne Priddy Muse on the death of her husband, Cal, and to Frances Calisch Rothenberg and her husband, William A. Rothenberg, R'39, on the death of their son, Paul.

Please send any information about yourself or classmates. Also, it is important to notify the alumni office and me of any address or phone number changes.

Mildred Cox Goode and her husband, A.W. "Skeet" Goode, R'42, moved last May to Lakeswood Manor in Richmond. They enjoyed a week with their daughter, Courtney, and her husband at Topsail Beach, N.C.

Juanita Tiller Elquist and a friend traveled to Charleston, S.C., where they toured the historic district. Juanita has completed 17 years of volunteer service at the Shepherd's Center.

Word from Elizabeth "Betsy"

Rice is that Demie Browne Blair has been transferred to the Glades at Westminster Canterbury because of memory loss. Demie still enjoys dancing.

Many thanks to Billy Jane Crosby Baker, who provided the above news. She says she is enjoying life at Cedarfield.

When Molly Warner Stephenson gave up driving because of her eyesight, she got a golf cart, which can go anywhere in their retirement complex. Molly still runs the rubber bridge games at Bayview and the duplicate bridge games at her church. Grandson Matthew, now a teenager, visited from Oregon during the summer.

Anne MacElroy MacKenzie doesn't get out much except to go to church. Since her stroke, she has difficulty remembering things, but Mac helps a lot. All their children visited during the summer.

Helen Curtis Patrick is justly proud of her daughter, Dale Patrick Brown, W'69 and G'78, has written a book on lectures given by famous people in Cincinnati during the 19th century. Helen went to Cincinnati for the book signing. We are sorry to know of the death of Helen's daughter-in-law in Georgia after a brief illness. Helen spent much of the summer watching her grandson play in Little League games. She also welcomed a new great-grandson.

Lucy Garnett Lucy's oldest granddaughter has received numerous scholarship offers. She is interested in philosophy, Latin, and art. Lucy continues to do research on the Amish and reads "heavy stuff."

Mimi Hill Erb is busy sorting through things to prepare for a smaller house. She anticipated a visit from her son, Douglas, who teaches in Taipei, and they were planning to travel to the Adirondacks with stops in the Washington area to visit her son Bruce's wife and other family members. Bruce commands the medical staff on the hospital ship Comfort. Mimi also welcomed a new great-granddaughter last summer.

Kay Hanley Wery loves the view from her ninth-floor apartment. She says the limitations of her space keep her constantly thinning things out. Kay is an avid reader.

Ann Burcher Stansbury and her husband, Warren A. Stansbury, R., attended an outdoor Army band concert at Fort Monroe where I was also present. Warren is doing well after heart surgery last winter. They plan to enjoy football this year at Virginia Tech, where their daughter is a staff member.

This was a busy summer with my children going and coming at intervals. I also had Tom's 16-year-old daughter here for several weeks. We had great fun together. I am happy that my broken arm healed well, and therapy helped me regain use of it. As I am writing this, the aircraft carrier George Washington is going by. From my seventh-floor condo, the flight deck is at eye level and the crew is standing at attention around the top deck. I wish you could be here to see it.

The art of teaching science

Dr. Ann Clark Howe, W'45

During World War II, Ann Clark Howe was among the few female chemistry majors.

A dearth of male students during and immediately following the war created opportunities for women, and Howe made the most of those opportunities at Richmond and then at the University of North Carolina.

"At UNC, I may not have been accepted into the organic chemistry program had the timing been different," Howe explains.

Even so, the dean encouraged her to enter the master's program in organic, rather than physical chemistry. "He was afraid I couldn't handle the physical chemistry," she laughs. Howe took his advice, however, and after completing her master's degree, she earned a Ph.D. in science and mathematics education at the University of Texas. Since then, she has devoted her career to the art of teaching science. "My goal was not to make all students scientists, but to make them understand the world better," she says.

Howe worked her way up to professor of science education at Syracuse University and later at North Carolina State, where she founded and directed the Center for Research in Mathematics and Science Education. She later chaired the Department of Curriculum and Instruction at the University of Maryland. She wrote a leading science educators' textbook, Engaging Children in Science (now in its third edition) before retiring from full-time teaching in 1994.

Since then, Howe has become a serious oil painter, joining an artists' cooperative near her home in Raleigh, N.C.

She still cherishes her Richmond connections. Her great-grandfather was Reuben Boatwright, R1858, the father of University President Frederic Boatwright, R1888. Her granddaughter, Patricia Chimery, '09, is a current student.

Howe remains close to her classmates, including Ann Seay Jackson, W'45, of Richmond and Mary Paulson Campbell, W'45, of Newport News, Va.

"We all agree that, while we had fun in college, we took our classes seriously and worked hard for the good, solid education for which we've always been thankful," she says. "I am indebted to Richmond."

My husband, Allen, died July 10. He was diagnosed with esophageal cancer in June 2006. After treatment, there was a brief respite of about three months, but the cancer returned. That type of cancer is particularly deadly, so we knew the prognosis was not good. I am glad so many of you knew him and that he had the opportunity to know several of you. I was indeed blessed with almost 30 years of marriage.

I look forward to hearing from you.

Reunion Reminder
April 11-13, 2008

If you would like to help plan your reunion, send e-mail to alumni@richmond.edu or call the alumni office at (804) 289-8026.

You have responded with enthusiasm about our new president and our upcoming 60th reunion.

First, I have sad news to report.

Helen Condyles Couphos died June 13 in New Brunswick, N.J., following a distinguished career teaching classical languages. Mary Cross Marshall recalls that Helen was her "twin sister" at Westhampton College and that she was a regular at reunions. Joan Johnson Sandidge, who lived at Cedarfield in Richmond, died on Aug. 18. Our loving sympathy is extended to Joan's and Helen's families.

Also, two of our classmates have lost their spouses. Emily Detrick Clouse wrote that Bob died July 12. He was being treated for a broken hip, and he had suffered from Alzheimer's for five years. Having been first widowed 14 years ago, Emily appreciates having two helpful stepdaughters in the area, and she planned to visit her daughter in South Carolina in September. Her two sons live in Arizona and Indiana. Even with progressing macular degeneration, Emily enjoys bridge and tennis.

Jane Belk Moncre sends gratitude for expressions of sympathy since the death of her husband on July 27 after a long battle with Parkinson's disease. Dr. James A. Moncre, R'49, had served Elon University as professor and vice president. Earlier in his career, he was a professor of history at Richmond College and served as dean of University College.

Virginia Kreyer has received the Antoinette Brown Award, which is presented annually to two clergywomen by the United Church of Christ. Virginia was recognized for her "pioneering and trailblazing ministry." Now living in a retirement community in Williamsburg, Virginia is already making plans to attend our reunion.

Patricia Parlow Broman is selling her cottage in Camden, Maine, but she will continue to spend summers there in a townhouse. Back in Fort Myers, Fla., for the winter, she enjoys her work in the library and with the drama group. She has four grandchildren. One is a student at William and Mary and one is at Middlebury have enjoyed stays in recent months at Virginia Beach, Williamsburg, and Massanutten Resort. Two grandchildren are in college and three are in high school in Virginia and Minnesota. The oldest of their five children has retired after 35 years of teaching.

Judith Barnett Seelhorst spent the summer hosting family reunions at her home in Kentucky. One granddaughter was selected as a summer Governor's Arts Scholar in ballet. Judy is teaching Sunday school for high school students.

Hannah Barlow Bain describes the activities of her high school-age grandchildren, Cody and Hannah, along with 3-year-old Jesse. Husband Jack continues to manage physical problems in good spirit.

Frances Stuart Bailey and her husband, Rolen C. Bailey, R'49, celebrated their 55th wedding anniversary with a trip to Lancaster and Hershey, Pa. Also, there was an 80th birthday

July to Florida with her two sons, two daughters, their spouses, and seven of nine grandchildren. They stopped in Sarasota to visit her sister, Rose "Posie" Koltukian Wallace, W'43.

Josephine Hoover Pittman has enjoyed trips to her beach home. Janice's son, Kelsey, is starting college this year, and Anne and Brian plan to retire their boat and relocate from St. Thomas to the mountains of north Georgia.

Rosie Calhoun McCarty and Jack are not traveling anymore, but she enjoys working with other seniors at their wellness center. Rosie says that for the first time in her life, she enjoys exercising. She also likes teaching a Bible class and reading. Jack had just completed another round of radiation and was doing well.

Rosie also wrote that Virginia "Ginny" Otey Dickinson died in May just two months after her husband, Jim, died from a recurrence of cancer. Ginny had a stroke last December and developed complications.

May Lee Yook Chung wrote that she and her husband, Ray, are enjoying retirement after 30 years of public school teaching. They have two children and two grandchildren. Their daughter is an administrator with Mercy Corps, a humanitarian organization in Portland, Ore., and her husband is an industrial designer. May Lee's son, Raymond, and his wife are both attorneys in Santa Fe, N.M. May Lee and Ray finally took their trip to China two years ago and have edited books and a souvenir magazine about the Chinese in Hawaii.

Libby Wilensky Hendler visited the University last September to see her great-nephew. Seeing the familiar places on campus was special. Following her husband's death two years ago, Libby has begun to travel again. She spent part of the winter in Bonita Springs, Fla., and also visited her son in California. In June she attended her granddaughter's high school graduation in New Jersey.

Doris Moore Shea has been taking bus trips, engaging in social activities and playing bridge. She enjoyed a trip to Seattle and then two weeks with friends at Ocean Isle, N.C., and Myrtle Beach, S.C.

Elizabeth Wood Roebach called from her home in Franconia, N.H., which she describes as a place of beauty in the White Mountains. She has a son in Olympia, Wash., a daughter close by in New Hampshire and a daughter in Warrenton, Va.

Elizabeth Koltukian Cowles attended a viola performance by her grandson, Will Frampton, at the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston. She was in San Antonio in May to attend her oldest grandson's graduation from the University of the Incarnate Word and back in June for his younger brother's high school graduation. Then there was a trip in Another note came from Oliver Trader Daley. She has four children, two with master's degrees and two with bachelor's degrees. She suffers from emphysema but does quite well. She mentioned her two sisters, who are Westhampton graduates. One sister died last June.

Mary Burnett Small, among others, sent me a lovely card following Matt's death. She referred to the losses that we are feeling.

Beth Wilburn Hooker told me about a surprise birthday party for Harriet Smith Powell planned by her husband and three daughters. The celebration was held at James River Country Club in Newport News, Va. The Westhampton guests, who had seats of honor, included John Moody Vincent, Cynthia Patrick Lawson Otte, Ida Eanes Patrick, Elaine Leonard Davis, Jane Dens McManigal, Virginia Shaw Warren, Audrey Bradford Saupe, and Beth.

Hazel Jennings Benninghove plans to move to Springdale, the newly developed part of the Lucy Corr Continuing Care Community. Hazel has been helping her daughter, Jan, move following the death of Jan's husband in January.

Betty Ann Allen Dillon is president of the board of the Shepherd's Center of Richmond, a non-profit organization that helps senior citizens remain independent. This summer she traveled to Germany on a trip for baseball enthusiasts sponsored by First Baptist Church. In July she and I visited Jamestown, Yorktown, and Williamsburg for a weekend. It was a lovely trip that coincided with my birthday.

Flo Crute Batiski's son, Richard, wrote me a kind note with news of her death in 2004. She died six months after her husband. Flo had three children and six grandchildren. Richard wrote of her love for her Westhampton classmates.

Pat Allen Winters has two college grandchildren. Ryan is a freshman at the University of Delaware, and Katherine is a junior at Wingate College. Pat continues her travels in the United States after having toured 47 foreign countries. Last fall she visited Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, and Nova Scotia. In July, she stayed on Mackinac Island, Mich. One of Pat's sons is a Baptist minister in Verona, Va., and the other works for a computer company and is often abroad. Pat lives in a retirement community in Charlestown, Md.

You will notice my new address at Cedarfield Continuing Care Community. Please write or call me with your news.

Several of our classmates met for lunch at Lewis Ginter Botanical Garden on June 20. Class President Doris Balderson Burbank, G'77, presided over a short meeting. Those in attendance, in addition to Doris and me, were Margaret "Maggie" Alexander Anderson, Lee Reeves Childress, Janice Brandenburg Halloran, Gene Hart Joyner, Maryanne Bugg Lambert, Frances "Frankie" Sutton Oliver, and Virginia W. Sims.

Lee Reeves Childress let us know that her grandson, Michael, a sophomore at the University of Massachusetts, made all A's last year. Lee visited the National Cathedral in Washington.

Janice Brandenburg Halloran was snowed in last Christmas with two grandchildren in Albuquerque, N.M. She also visited her daughter, Susie, who is helping establish a new genetics and genomics program at the University of Miami.

Gene Hart Joyner let us know that her oldest grandson married in February. He and his bride live in Wilmington, N.C.

Maryanne Bugg Lambert's youngest grandchild, Mary Elizabeth, graduated from Longwood University, and the other twin granddaughter, Macel, married in July in Salem, Va.

When Virginia Sims went to Eagle Eyrie in May, she also took a bus tour to Crabtree Falls.

Marjorie Pansen Owen enjoyed a nine-day cruise of Alaska with her Senior Circle. When she returned, she had a family vacation. Marjorie keeps busy with church and community work and takes frequent day trips with her Senior Circle.

Louise "Ludie" Hickerson Wiley

took a three-week trip to England. She was especially excited about her stay in Oxford, where she met Laura Barrosse-Antle, '06. Ludie says Laura, who is working on a Ph.D. in chemistry at St. John's College, seemed "amazed that I was still ambulatory and traveling around." Ludie stayed in London near Tower Bridge for a week and spent another week near Hadrian's Wall. Back home, she went to Gettysburg, Pa., with daughter Kate.

Jean Tinsley Martin and Roy went to Italy in June with their daughter, her husband and two children. They stayed in Tuscany for a week, then went to Rome, then visited friends in Wales.

Our deepest sympathy goes to Peggy King Nelson and her family on the death of her husband, Earle Thomas Nelson, B'52, in June.

Our daughter Mary-Leslie Duty Emmons, L'88, and her husband, Michael, participated in another Ravenchase Adventure. In July, with team members Corina M. Ghita, '04, her friend Jason Leppard, and his brother Matt, they drove from Washington to New Orleans, clearing eight states in seven days as they decoded and followed convoluted clues. They placed second among teams from all over the nation.

Les and I had an estate sale. With the sale of our home of 39 years, we have been settling down in our condo at Hathaway Towers, which we love. There are quite a few residents here who have attended our University.

Mary Lee Moore May and Ed vacationed in the Carolinas with Ed's family. In June they spent a week at Kingsmill.

Maryglyn Cooper McGraw and her husband, Walter J. McGraw, R'50, had a difficult summer. Wally was very ill, and after major surgery, he was in the hospital and rehab for six weeks. Maryglyn thanks all of their alumni friends for their thoughtfulness and letters.

Norma Streever Craig and Norm were in Canada in July so Norm could attend a wood-carving class. They stayed in Toronto and at Niagara-on-the-Lake.

Bob and I were in Denver in August, visiting our children and our grandson. We also spent time in Rocky Mountain National Park.

Please write me with news for the next edition.

Reunion Reminder
April 11-13, 2008

If you would like to help plan your reunion, send e-mail to alumni@richmond.edu or call the alumni office at (804) 289-8026.

Betty Montgomery Marsh, W, and her husband, Cecil E. Marsh, R, live in Richmond. Betty is president of the Boatwright Society, which is composed of alumni who graduated from the University at least 50 years ago. She and Betty Lear Miller, W, who lives in Hampton, Va., enjoy meeting for lunch.

Elizabeth Ann Helms Taylor-Lemoine and her husband, Roland, live in Las Vegas.

CLASS OF '54

Jane Gill Tombes and her husband, Avrett S. Tombes, R, will have four grandchildren in college this year. Their youngest grandchild is not quite two.

Barbara Jones Walker and her husband Tom took an Alaskan cruise in June with their three children, spouses, and five grandchildren.

Nancy Graham Harrell had a brief skirmish with breast cancer last spring, but is fine now.

Barbara Cronin Lovell hosted another get-together at her place in Maine, but those planning to attend ran into one of those notorious East Coast storms. Barbara Bull Tall was the only one to arrive on schedule. Sara Sherman Cowherd and Nancy got delayed at JFK and had to spend the night in a hotel with no baggage. Cos Washburn Barnes got stuck in Raleigh, N.C., and returned home. Once the rest of the group assembled, they had a phone chat with Mary Jane Miller. Cronin took the group on an excursion into New Hampshire's White Mountains, where they rode a cog train to the top of Mount Washington.

Nancy and Walter, who retired last year, returned in August from a three-week stay in Europe. They spent the last week in Paris right across from the Louvre.

It is with sadness that I report the death of Shirley Hanbury Williams, W'64, sister of Ann Hanbury Callis.

Shirley died of a heart attack on July 31. Ann, I know I speak for our entire class in sending you our deepest sympathy.

James E. Lindsey, R, is professor emeritus at Virginia Commonwealth University. He and his wife, Carolyn Neale Lindsey, W'55, live in Richmond.

Timothy T. Pohmer, R, and his wife, Nancy, live in Sewickley, Pa. He retired in 1998 after teaching at Butler County Community College for 30 years. A master instructor for the Coast Guard, he teaches courses on safe boating and has done patrol duty on the Chesapeake Bay and Lake Arthur for the past 20 years.

Wilbur E. "Gene" Thomas, R, and his wife, Mary, live in Lawrenceville, Va. He has served eight years on Virginia's State Board for Community Colleges and 27 years on the board of Greensville Memorial Hospital in Emporia. His granddaughter, Ariel Thomas, has sung the national anthem at several UR football and basketball games. Her father is Raymond A. Thomas, R'85.

CLASS OF '55

Unfortunately, this report begins with sad news. Ann Cohen Schiff passed away on July 28. Ann was a widow living in Richmond, and her three children live on the West Coast. Our condolences go to her family.

The death on June 26 of Dr. Myron Kauffman, husband of Jean Crittenden Kauffman, must also be conveyed. Jean is thankful for the wonderful support from her children and friends. The Hume Transplantation Library at the VCU Health System will be renamed the David Hume-Myron Kauffman Transplantation Medical Library. Myron was a pioneer in both the practice and science of transplantation. Our thoughts and prayers continue to be with Jean.

Sue Smith Van Winkler and Van had a summer of concern. Their 17-year-old grandson, Christopher, was critically injured in an automobile accident. At this writing, Sue reported that his recuperation was going well.

Polly Bundick Dize was on the UR campus during the summer when she came with one of her daughters to bring a granddaughter to basketball camp. They enjoyed lunch at Phil's on Grove Avenue, which was reminiscent of our college days.

Physical problems, ranging from a sprained ankle to food poisoning to ear problems, are not keeping Myra Embrey Wormald from traveling. The Wormald family reunion was held in July at Hilton Head, S.C. In August Myra enjoyed an Alaskan trip with her grandchildren, and trips to Dubai and France were in the planning stages.

Peggy Hall Flippin and Edward A. Flippin, R'56, are happy grandparents. Their daughter and her husband have a daughter living in Richmond and a son studying at Loyola University. Their son and his wife live nearby, and they have toddlers.

A July trip to Hawaii, by way of San Diego, was a splendid vacation for Jackie Kilby Brooks. She spent several days on Oahu, the big island of Hawaii, and Kauai. She cruised on a catamaran and flew in an airplane over volcanoes. In San Diego, she enjoyed Balboa Park, the zoo, and a Padres baseball game.

Emily Menefee Johnston, along with her husband, Bill, and their son, Burt, attended a reunion of the 390th Bomb Group in Salt Lake City. Bill was a tail gunner on a B-17 during World War II.

Pat Minor Hoover's mother, Elizabeth Gill Minor, W'31 and G'33, moved from King and Queen County into Pat's weaving studio in Bridgewater last fall. The studio is now in the basement.

Grace Phillips Webb and her husband spent a week at Virginia Beach to celebrate their 21st anniversary. They also were planning a riverboat trip down the Ohio and a train trip to Washington with a grandson.

Burrell Williams Stultz and her husband, John L. Stultz, B'58, went to the beach and visited their favorite ranch in Wyoming with their daughter and her family this summer. They also drove into Montana along the Bear Tooth Highway. Burrell had dance classes and attended a chemistry camp. She chairs the Science Department at Collegiate Schools and is teaching part time this year. She is also on the board of Riverside School, a school for children with dyslexia.

Gail Tench Miller had been in touch with Grace Phillips Webb.

Gail, a widow, was spending the summer in Alaska. She is in Emerald Isle, N.C., in the winter.

Joy Winstead has a new career—playing the horses at Colonial Downs! Joy picked the 1-2-3 winners in the last race and won enough to cover her expenses and other bets with $20 to take home!

Mary Ida Nelson Bolton plans to have knee surgery. She and Stony are spending more time at their Myrtle Beach home, where Stony is president of the homeowners' association. When Mary Ida is in Danville, she and Pat Kantner Knick talk each morning.

In June, Jody Weaver Yuhase and I went with our husbands to a reunion of the cadet corps from Richmond's Thomas Jefferson High School. Jody had been a sponsor for one of the companies.

Eleven members of the Class of 1955 met on campus for lunch on Aug. 13 in the newly renovated Heilman Dining Center. The food was quite good, and the new "glass room" provided private dining. Our group included Margaret English Lester and a friend from Martinsville, Sue Smith Van Winkler from Charlottesville, Jean Ruddle Migneault from Williamsburg, and me from Urbanna. Attending from the Richmond area were:

Ruth Gouldin Kelley, Jackie Kilby Brooks, Emily Menefee Johnston, Grace Phillips Webb, Barbara Turner Willis, Burrell Williams Stultz, and Joy Winstead.

There are many exciting plans being carried out on the UR campus. The Weinstein Center for Recreation and Wellness is open. A new campus facility will be constructed for international programs. There are plans for the Westhampton Center to be built beside the Deaneery. A new emergency notification system is operational, and Dr. Edward L. Ayers has become the new president.

Please remember to earmark your donations for the Westhampton College Class of 1955 George M. Modlin Scholarship for the Arts.

Fourteen of us had a delightful lunch on July 16 as guests of Ann Peery Oppenheimer at the Country Club of Virginia. Guests included: Susan Quinn Wagner, Rose Dranchak Martin, Edna Wagstaff Warncke, G'65, Anne Stuart Hartz Garnett, Phyllis Gee Wacker, G'65, Helen Melton Lukhard, Janet Knobel Jones, Doris Huffman Moore, Charlotte Hart Simpson, Anne Jennings Vaughan, Diane Brown Higgins, Shirlee Garrett Maxson, W'55, Ann Peery Oppenheimer, and Pat McElroy Smith. After lunch, Phyllis and I agreed to share the duties of class secretary, so please send news.

It was good to hear from a lot of folks even though they could not attend the luncheon. Thelma Flynn Helm was visiting her mother. Bev Drake Herring was taking three granddaughters to Williamsburg. Helen H. Kinnett's son, Bill, and his family were visiting for two weeks in July. Dottie Stiff Price and her husband, Madison R. Price, W'55, were taking a class. (I saw them in a restaurant in Nags Head, N.C., last summer and had a nice talk.) Winkle Gray Stettinius's husband, Wally, was having hip replacement surgery. Lois M. Reamy was back in New York after spending three months in King George with a dislocated shoulder. Jeanie Branan was the guest of a friend on the Queen Mary 2 for a trip to Southampton, England, with a four-day stop where classes are given by Oxford professors, and the Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts presented workshops and plays. Ann Carol Weaver Malcolm was attending Danville's annual Iron Heritage Festival in connection with her shop of miniatures. Helen Siner Wood was taking her youngest daughter and family to the airport on their way to moving to London. We also heard from Anne Pope Kitchen, Ann A. App, and Nancy Saunders Burner, all of whom had previous commitments.

Lisa Simmonds Smart flew up from Texas for our 55-year reunion at Thomas Jefferson High School. She stayed with Edna Wagstaff Warncke, G'65, who hosted a fun gathering with Diane Brown Higgins, Anne Stuart Hartz Garnett, Margaret Macon Moring, Lisa, and me. Lisa stays busy with family, writing, and traveling.

Mary Mullin Mowery wrote that she did eight tap-dancing shows in March, had successful cataract surgeries in June, and underwent surgery in August at the M.D. Anderson Cancer Center in Houston. She is recuperating nicely at her home in Las Vegas.

Jan Hogge Atkins passed through Richmond on her way home from her high school's 55-year reunion. I managed to have lunch with her, her sister, Bette Morton, and Alice McCarty Haggerty, W'55. Jan is state president of PEO, an organization that raises money for college scholarships for women.

Of course, I still have weekly conversations with Helen Crittenden Culbertson. She and Wayne have built a log home on the Rappahannock River. Helen's daughter, Jennifer Driscoll, is a doctor in the Navy and is being sent to Afghanistan for about a year, leaving her husband and six children in North Carolina. Helen is trying to help as much as possible.

I am very sorry to say that since our 50-year reunion in April 2006, we have lost four classmates (that I know of): Carolyn Owen Baker, Lillian Stephenson Stroud, Charlotte Henley Oberg, and Virginia Jones Miller.

Those of us in the Richmond area hope to meet again in November. Please call, write, or e-mail with news. Westhampton Class Secretaries

Carol Murphy Paulson lives in Lake Ridge, Va., where she does church volunteer work and enjoys her two grandchildren.

Nancy Moore Plonk retired from teaching on the Eastern Shore when she suffered a stroke. She and William have a grandson at the University.

Ruth Tipton Powers of McLean, Va., is a retired systems engineer who volunteers as a scholarship fundraiser. She also is an AARP tax aide and is active in her church choir.

Mary Van Horn Pratt is a retired ophthalmic pathologist. She lives in Snellville, Ga., where she enjoys raising bonsai.

Nancy Bertsch Ratchford is a retired teacher in Annapolis, Md. Catch her in Key West in the winter.

Ann Lee Hines Reamy is a retired educator. Her husband, Charles, is the mayor of Boynton, Va., and they are both active community leaders. You should see them dance!

Beverley Ambler Robertson has done social work and worked in her husband's medical office in Bowling Green, Ky. Her volunteer work includes the church, historical properties, and refugees.

Carolyn Naumann Robertson is our class poet. She has had her own interior design business, served as a missionary, and is an antiques dealer. She also is a master gardener who volunteers at Colonial Williamsburg.

Shannon Bryant Starke is a ballroom dance instructor, piano teacher, and church organist in Springfield, Va. She volunteers as a music docent at Arlington House, Lee-Fendall House, and Confederate Memorial Hall.

Rita Davidson Stein is a social worker, and she volunteers in Richmond with Jewish Family Services, the Interfaith Council, and other synagogue organizations.

Meg Kidd Tenney has done social work and teaching. She lives in Birmingham, Ala., and volunteers with the Scouts, League of Women Voters, her church, and local schools.

Mary Ellen Thomas is a retired librarian who moved to Chattanooga, Tenn. She is an artist and world traveler.

Joyce Garrett Tidey, G'77, is a retired guidance counselor in Richmond. She is a docent for the Henrico Courts and is active in many activities on campus. Thanks, Joyce, for serving as our class president.

Faye Jones Townsend volunteers with arts and crafts for developmentally disabled adults, teaches ceramics, and is an advocate for the mentally ill. She lives in Bloomington, Ill., where she participates in an aquatic exercise group.

CLASS CONNECTIONS

Jackie Randle Tucker lives in Richmond and is a retired Spanish teacher and current ESL volunteer. She is also a gardener.

Helen Melton Vandermark lives in Williamsburg, Va., and is a former office administrator for Colonial Williamsburg. She has seven grandchildren and is active in church and quilting guilds.

Ann Wagner Westbrook-Stenson is a retired biology teacher. She lives in Palm City, Fla., where she volunteers taping books for the visually impaired, works with abused children, and does fundraising for hospice. She is also a golfer.

Carmen Austin Williams is a retired educator. She lives in Mineral, Va., where she is active in volunteer work, including the library club and her church.

Pat Harper Winston was ordained in 2002 and is a volunteer associate chaplain. She and her husband, Robert L. Winston, R'58, live in Richmond.

What a remarkable experience to be with so many classmates 50 years later. It gets better and more rewarding every time we are together.

Reunion Reminder
April 11-13, 2008

If you would like to help plan your reunion, send e-mail to alumni@richmond.edu or call the alumni office at (804) 289-8026.

Our 50-year reunion will be April 11-13, 2008, so mark your calendars. Our reunion committee has been hard at work planning a great weekend.

Watch your mail for more information.

Sarah Ashburn Holder had a busy summer as chairman of her church's first music, arts, dance, and drama camp. They had 60 children in grades one through five. Sarah has been elected president of her church choir in Raleigh, N.C. She was busy planning fundraisers so the choir could perform in Washington on Memorial Day weekend.

Nancy Nelson Tweed had a wonderful trip to Italy with friends from Virginia. It was great to see Nancy, when she and her family attended the tea room at my church during Spoleto.

Mary Jean Simpson Garrett and her husband, Harry W. Garrett, R., have a son in Charleston, S.C. Mary Jean does volunteer work for the Bedford Welcome Center.

I had a delightful lunch with Mariett Ayers Eggleston and her husband to be in Charleston to attend her high school reunion.

Carolyn Quinn Brooks called in early summer, and we had a long conversation about gardening and flower design. She and her husband stay busy with their business, Gro-N-Sho (Rosess).

Please send me your news. Plan to attend the reunion in April and bring pictures from our years at Westhampton. They will bring back wonderful memories.

Rebecca Branch Faulconer, W., is professor of art education at Asbury College. She and her husband, Harold, live in Lexington, Ky. They have six grandchildren.

CLASS OF '59

LaVerne Watson Edwards is looking forward to husband Bob's retirement from General District Court at the end of this year after nearly 40 years on the bench. They hope to do some world traveling and visit children and grandchildren in New York and California.

Betty Beryl "BB" Harvey Strum says many of the Camp Carybrook pep songs came from the Westhampton songbook. She rode through the UR campus in August to show her English camp staff from Oxford how beautiful it is. They thought it was lovely. In May she traveled to Oregon, Seattle, and the San Juan Islands, and in July she went to Montana. While she was in Richmond in August, she celebrated the eighth birthday of her youngest grandchild. Her oldest will be a teenager next year.

In the fall, she returned to working again at Barnes and Noble in Radford.

Susan "Sue" Kaufman Wilson moved to a condo in Norfolk, Va. She volunteers at the art museum and is a member of the Symphony League, Opera Guild, and Chrysler Museum. She continues to enjoy her grandchildren, who live close by.

Beverly "Bev" Brown Peace is still trying to find help for neuropathy but is not having much luck. She is taking therapy three times a week to regain strength and flexibility. She continues to drive and enjoy the senior group at her church, but she misses working at the library.

Peggy Dulin Crews enjoys her grandchildren, even though she still has difficulty focusing her eyes.

In June, Barbara Dulin Polis took a vacation with 12 family members at Tyler Place Resort on Lake Champlain. In early September, Barbara and a friend went to New York for the U.S. Open.

Mary Ann Williams Haske's son Jim and his wife, Liza, are teaching in Damascus, Syria. Son Tom and his wife, Chantal, are teaching in Vietnam, Laos, where their son, Ethen, is in preschool. Mary Ann took her new van to Baltimore, Delaware, and the Eastern Shore. All her children and their families visited her this summer. She and I enjoy meeting for lunch.

Sylvia "Sibby" Haddock Young reports that her husband, Paige A. Young, R., is enjoying retirement. The Fredericksburg paper published a feature story about his retirement. A second article highlighted the Christmas Eve service he has been doing as a "sermon in song" for many years. The Religious Herald published a beautiful article by Fred Anderson, and the Virginia Baptist Children's Home dedicated a golf tournament to Paige. Sibby and Paige went on a cruise to Bermuda and paid to cruise to Alaska in the spring. Sibby met roommate Eleanor Dickson Campbell and suite-mate Ruth Adkins Hill, G'85, for lunch at the Iron Horse in Ashland.

Nancy Taylor Rowe and her husband have almost finished building a new cottage next to the one they have owned since 1990 in Kill Devil Hills, N.C.

In August, Jan Martin Wyndham, G'70, and husband Herb vacationed on Tilgham Island, Md., where they took a boat tour of lighthouses in the Chesapeake Bay. Jean had hernia surgery again in July, but has recovered and returned to work at Rainbow Station. She enjoys time with the grandchildren.

Bonnie Lewis Haynie won a trip to New York at a silent auction sponsored by the Spider Club. She and her daughter spent three nights in New York and saw four Broadway shows. Bonnie and her husband, R. Gerald Haynie, B., spent a week in Hilton Head in May. In June she went to Sandbridge, Va., with a group of ladies.

Mary Trew Biddlecomb Linquist's son, Jeff, and his family moved to Albany, Ga. Mary Trew and Jerry spent 10 days there after Christmas and enjoyed a week with them in June at Hilton Head. In September, they celebrated Mary Trew's and her granddaughter's birthdays. Last December, daughter Carey and her husband adopted Hailey Elizabeth, their fourth child. Now Mary Trew has six grandchildren. In June Mary Trew, daughter Carey, and granddaughters Sarah and Hailey were in Myrtle Beach, S.C., where Sarah participated in a national dance workshop and competition. Sarah attends the Appomattox Regional Governor's School of the Arts and Technology, concentrating in musical theater. Mary Trew still tutors Spanish in her home, volunteers at a local hospital, and sings in the church choir.

Jacquelin "Jackie" Connell Atkinson and husband Charles have moved into a new house in Crossdaile Village in Durham, N.C. They like being close to their grandchildren. Some years back, Jackie rediscovered the flute and now plays in a quartet and band.

Martha Jordan Chukinas continues to direct and manage the Heartstrings of Danville. She is interested in preservation and restoration, and she was pleased that a large preservation summit was held in September in Danville.

In Mary Katharine Schools Covington and husband Bill visited their son and his bride, who live near Pittsburgh. In June Katharine and Bill traveled to Europe and took a riverboat cruise from Prague to Berlin.

This summer Beverly Eubank Evans, Bonnie Lewis Haynie, Ruth Adkins Hill, and Mary Trew Biddlecomb Linquist enjoyed lunch with Mary Frances "Moff" Coleman in Gordonsville, Va.

Congratulations to Nancy Hopkins Phillips and her husband, William K. Phillips, R'58, who celebrated their 50th anniversary on Aug. 25.

I had my usual week at Nags Head this summer. My daughter, Carol, surprised me by flying into Norfolk from Hilton Head and driving down to Nags Head. It was a wonderful birthday present to have her spend several days with me! I am still line dancing, taking ballroom lessons, singing in the church choir, taking minutes for the neighborhood recreation association and church meetings, and attending woman's club meetings, where I see other members of the Class of '59. I usually see Gloria "Ginny" Strickland Holloway exercising at the YMCA.

Please send news for the next issue.

Advocating for agriculture

Robert S. Bloxom Sr., R'59

After serving in the Virginia House of Delegates for 25 years, Robert Bloxom became Virginia's first secretary of agriculture and forestry in 2004.

Virginia created the new cabinet position to give a greater voice to industries that contribute more than $47 billion each year to the commonwealth's economy. Before 2004, Virginia was one of only five states that did not have a cabinet-level position for agriculture.

"From the very beginning, Virginia's agricultural influence in politics was dominant, and that majority was well-represented," Bloxom explains. "But as the urban and suburban populations grew, it was time for agriculture and forestry to have a voice in the governor's cabinet."

Bloxom, a Republican, was appointed to the position by former Gov. Mark Warner, a Democrat, and he has continued to serve in the cabinet of Democratic Gov. Tim Kaine.

"Neither governor was interested in the (party) label," Bloxom says. "The interests of agriculture and forestry were their focus, and I grew up on the Eastern Shore, where agriculture is dominant."

Bloxom attended elementary school in the town of Bloxom, which was named for his grandfather, who owned the general store at the crossroads. "My father moved four and a half miles to Mappsville and started a general store there," Bloxom recalls. Today Robert Bloxom carries on the family retailing tradition as president of Bloxom Auto Supply Co.

He and his wife, Patricia, have two children and four grandchildren. Their son, Robert S. Bloxom Jr., R'85, is also an alumnus of the University.

During his time in the House of Delegates, Bloxom served on the Agriculture, Labor and Commerce Committee and the Chesapeake and its Tributaries Committee. He also chaired the multistate Chesapeake Bay Commission.

As secretary of agriculture and forestry, Bloxom oversees the Department of Forestry, the Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services, the Virginia Agricultural Council, and the Virginia Marine Products Board.

Reunion Reminder

April 11-13, 2008

If you would like to help plan your reunion, send e-mail to alumni@richmond.edu or call the alumni office at (804) 289-8026.

We have lost another of our classmates. Claudia L. Dodson died Aug. 18 in Charlottesville, Va. She retired in 2002 as assistant director of the Virginia High School League. After leaving Westhampton, she earned a master's degree from the University of Tennessee. She was inducted into the Virginia Softball Hall of Fame, Virginia High School Hall of Fame, and the National School Hall of Fame. She was instrumental in expanding athletic opportunities for girls. We extend our sympathy to her family and friends.

Peggy St. Clair Stevens and her husband, C. Daniel Stevens, R'62, report that their son, Mark, was married June 9 in Richmond. Jean Morris Foster and Margaret Brower Almond were among the guests.

Save the date for our reunion in April. It should be lots of fun.

Joseph E. Talley, R. is clinical professor of medical psychology at Duke University. He and his wife, Vibeke, celebrated their 25th anniversary with a trip to Denmark, where they were married. Their daughter, Kristin, serves in the Peace Corps in Niger, Africa. Their twin sons, David and Jonathan, are juniors in college. Joseph enjoyed a reunion last year with fellow alumni from the University Choir, and he had lunch with Ken Blick, R'58 and G'60, professor of psychology, emeritus.

CLASS OF '72

Rachel Pierce Newell, Nancy Clevinger Carpenter, L'80, and Judy Johnson Mawyer gathered at Rachel's cottage on the Chesapeake Bay in August. Rachel traveled to France over spring break, and her daughter, Mary, was married in June. Nancy's son, John, is a senior in high school. Marilyn Henry Tomb wasn't able to make it to the bay since her son had gotten married just the week before, but her daughter, Peyton, traveled to Italy over the summer with a church music group. Judy tells me that Carolee Dykes Hall, G'76, works at the University. Also, Judy reports that Mary Marshall Taylor Lawhorn and her husband, John, still live in London. Their son, Windthrop, is a teenager. Also, Tricia Mason Prillaman's daughter, Emily, is getting married this month. Her fiancé recently returned from Iraq.

Nancy MacCaffray Church reports that her daughter is expecting a girl in November. Nancy's son has a 3-year-old son. She continues to work for Bank of America and still has horses, dogs, and a cat.

Susan Clarke Schaar was busy with the reopening of the State Capitol this spring. Queen Elizabeth spoke to a joint session of the Virginia General Assembly, and Susan had a great seat. Susan visited Ireland, Belgium, and Slovenia in October. Her husband, Bill, is happily retired, and they have two grandsons.

Vivian Stephenson Clingenpeel saw the "new" capitol in July and was very impressed! She and her husband, Michael J. Clingenpeel, R. have a son, Tim, who is planning a California wedding in March. He is a law student at George Mason and completed a summer internship at the Attorney General's Office in Richmond.

Margaret League St. Clair had lunch with Cathy Woolcott Edwards and Ludi Stopps Webber in August. Ludi has been to Japan recently, and her daughter married in May. Cathy and her husband, Fayne, have a home on the water in White Stone, Va. Margaret is still subbing and tutoring at Collegiate and The Steward School. This fall she traveled to New Orleans to visit friends and to Houston to visit her daughter and son-in-law.

Faye Patteson Green has been busy caring for her parents and is eagerly anticipating her first grandchild in November. She saw Libby Lynch Heskett and her husband, Ray K. "Kenny" Heskett, B. at Green Front this summer.

More grandparent news came from Harriette Turner Evans and her husband, Timothy J. Evans, R. Adam Robert was born March 5 to Harriette's daughter, Joanne Evans Sahnus, '02, and son-in-law, Jacob H. Sahnus, '99. Harriette and Tim's son, Jonathan T. Evans, '98, and his wife, Ashley, are expecting their first child in November.

A 90-foot pine tree crashed into the home of Gwen Fletcher Duncan and Gregory L. Duncan, R'75. Luckily, no one was hurt. Renovation is a slow process, but they are hoping for completion this fall. Work and church activities keep them busy.

Janet Uley Wimmer is a first-time grandma and loves taking care of her granddaughter. She continues teaching art at Faith Christian School in Roanoke, Va. Her husband, Robert C. Wimmer, R. has given up basketball for golf.

Kathy A. Kirk lost her youngest brother, Bruce, this past May. She has been busy this summer on the Eastern Shore of Maryland helping out his family.

Nancy J. Boykin and family trekked to Wyoming this summer, camping in the wilderness of the Wind River Range with the help of three llamas. Their son, James, is marching in the high school band and filling out college applications. Nancy's husband is directing two productions and acting in one. Both continue to teach at Temple University.

Ann W. Wilkerson is in her 25th year at United Airlines, where she has held a variety of interesting jobs. She and her husband, Keith, have two daughters. Lindsay Jane is a junior at the University of Illinois, and Courtney just started at Eastern Illinois University. Both daughters are on their schools' dance teams, and Ann and Keith take advantage of every opportunity to see them perform.

Nancy Manning Knight's son, Will, is getting married in October in Buffalo. Nancy and Chris Steinbach Gibson met in Baltimore in July and had a wonderful visit.

Ann Greene Turner and her husband, R. Wertenbaker "Wertie" Turner, R'68, managed a family vacation with all of their grown children. Their son, Baker, is in his second year at the Darden School. Katherine is a labor-and-delivery nurse at Martha Jefferson Hospital, and Elizabeth is in her second year at the University of Virginia. Ann and I are both season ticket holders for Spider basketball games.

Like Ann, my family was able to vacation together this summer. My husband, Allen J. "Al" Mollen, R'69, and I met up with our daughters, Abby and Rian C. Mollen, '00, in San Diego. Rian came from New York with her fiancé, Kevin Madayag. They are planning an October 2008 wedding. Rian is a copywriter at an ad agency in New York. Abby flew in from Chicago, where she is a law student at Northwestern University. Her graduation in May is helping to fill up our 2008 calendar. Al continues to work in real estate, and I am still working at the University. It is fun to see our school grow and change.

Thank you for my many e-mails. I look forward to hearing from all of you. Westhampton Class Secretary

Reunion Reminder
April 11-13, 2008

If you would like to help plan your reunion, send e-mail to alumni@richmond.edu or call the alumni office at (804) 289-8026.

Sally A. Voris has been living on a farm near Taneytown, Md., for over a year. She grows vegetables, flowers, and herbs, and she hosts seasonal events and full-moon celebrations. Check out her Web site at www.whitrosefarm.com.

Nancy Martin Jett and her husband, Barry L. Jett, R'72, are enjoying their grandson, Noble, whose mother is Maureen Jett Gladden, '01. Nancy has cut back on working two days a week and stays busy with aging parents, trips to her vacation home in Deltaville, sporadic genealogy research, and playing with Noble.

Carol G. Baker is enjoying retirement and keeping busy with houseguests and home projects. She volunteers at Lewis Ginter Botanical Gardens in Richmond and helps with cooking classes at Sur La Table. She has started a volunteer venture as a regional coordinator for local clinics participating in the Reach Out and Read program, which encourages parents to read to their preschoolers. Carol reports that Sharon Foster Burdick is involved in the Reach Out and Read program in Northern Virginia.

The daughter of Marci Weinberg went to basketball camp at UR during the summer. Now she wants to study there instead of at Harvard. Of course, Rachel is only in the eighth grade, but Marci says she was "pleased when she fell in love with my alma mater."

Sam and I have just returned from our annual trek to Pawley's Island, S.C. All of the children, one spouse, one significant other, and one grandchild were able to join us for the first week, and we spent the second week recovering.

If we have not contacted you, please e-mail us at lauraleechandler@comcast.net and join the group! We heard from the following classmates for this issue.

Pam Pulley says she and her husband, Glenn W. Pulley, R'73, are finding some time for golf. She finally gave in to her golfing family, and she loves it!

Beth Woody, Grace Robinson den Hartog, Jean Dagenhart Smith, Betsy Ray Cobb, and Donna M. Persing had a get-together in July at Jean's Smith Mountain Lake condo.

Linda Fernald Honaker wrote to say that Stephen graduated from East Carolina University and has a job in Richmond with Tektronics, an industrial design firm. After riding his bicycle across the United States and participating in a sculpture symposium in Finland, Stephen is living at home. Linda's husband, Paul, is starting his 34th year at Bon Air Baptist Church as minister of music, and she is beginning her 34th year of teaching music in elementary school. Linda has earned a master's degree in music education. She says she runs just enough to be in two or three shorter races a year and has added biking to her exercise regimen.

Beth Neal Jordan's daughter, Laura, is working in Rwanda, Africa, through a church-sponsored program, Youth With a Mission. Elise is in her second year at the University of Virginia, and Paul continues to play soccer and golf.

Peggy Heath Johnson, her husband, Jeff, and their son, Jordan, visited Nova Scotia this summer.

Susan Lindler Stephenson has returned to full-time teaching at St. Margaret's School. She says she missed connecting with students. Her husband, Thomas E. "Ned" Stephenson, R'76, works at the Virginia Tobacco Commission. Ann is finishing a master's degree in accountancy, and Carolyn and Claire are at the University of Virginia, where Carolyn is in a doctoral program and Claire is doing research in the psychology department.

Janet Ferrell says her family has recovered from Meredith's session as a Senate page last year. Meredith and Melissa are in their sophomore and senior years at the Governor's School. The girls continue to play volleyball, and Melissa has a mentorship with Venture Richmond, while also trying to navigate the college admissions process. Janet is chairing communications for the Tuckahoe Artists Association and teaching citizenship in the ESL program at her church. She has students from several countries including Afghanistan, Bangladesh, Haiti, Cambodia, El Salvador, and Uganda. She is also active in the Daughters of the American Revolution. She and her husband, Mark, spent time at the river this summer at the cottage next to Carolyn Ridgway Cook and her husband, Dick.

Tina Marston Kurys had a great summer that included camping near Bar Harbor, Maine, riding horses in British Columbia, Canada, and visiting her sister in Idaho. Her husband, Dan, enjoys sailboat racing, and their daughter, Julia, 13, likes to cook.

Diane MacIlroy Moncre lost her mother to lung cancer last year. Earlier this year, Diane was diagnosed with breast cancer but is currently in remission. She continues to tutor students in math. Diane frequently sees Cindy Nunis Evans, and several times a year she visits her son and his wife in Houston, where he is an attorney.

Judy Owen Hopkins and her husband, Hop, celebrated their 33rd anniversary in August. Hop continues to practice pathology at High Point Regional Health Center, and Judy practices oncology at the Forsyth Regional Cancer Center, where she also heads the research program. Ben graduated from Wheaton College last year and is in graduate school at East Carolina University.

My daughter, Becca, is in Ghana, Africa, working in an orphanage, and Katie continues to work in development at St. Joseph's Villa in Richmond. Over the summer, Peggy Heath Johnson and Beth Neal Jordan visited me in Virginia Beach.

Please send me your e-mail addresses and let's all reconnect.

His-and-her careers

Patricia Little Rowland, W'77 and GB'81

The University has been fertile ground for romance in Pat Rowland's family. It's where her mom met her dad. It's where her aunt met her uncle. And it's where Pat hooked her husband, Philip Rowland, W'74 and GB'81, while body surfing on the rapids of the James River.

"It probably was dangerous," Pat admits, "but a lot of the kids did it."

They married in the chapel three months after Pat graduated and returned to earn his-and-her MBAs in 1981. By then, they were working for major corporations—Pat at CIGNA (insurance) and Phil at Graybar (electric).

They relocated four times as they climbed their career ladders. "Two of the four moves were mine, and two were his," Pat notes.

St. Louis was their first stop, Graybar's headquarters town. Then Philadelphia, headquarters of CIGNA, where Pat became president of Intracorp, a subsidiary that manages medical and disability cases.

The next stop was Old Sturbridge Village, Mass., halfway between Phil's job in Boston and Pat's work in Hartford, Conn., as senior vice president of CIGNA Healthcare. They lived in an old house that one of Phil's fraternity brothers restored for them. "That was our favorite place to live," Pat says. "Our commutes were pretty awful, but they didn't seem so bad at the time." Finally, they moved to Chicago in 2002, a career move for Phil that took Pat back to her hometown.

They have since retired to focus on non-profit work, traveling, and spending more time with Pat's parents, Ann Clark Little, W'48, and Dr. Randel Little, R'48.

Pat's non-profit work includes service on Richmond's Board of Trustees, where she chairs the advancement committee. She also serves as president of the board for the Chicagoland Affiliate of Susan G. Komen for the Cure, and she chairs the policy committee of Chicago's West Suburban Humane Society board.

Another joy has been traveling with Phil, including a trip to China last year. They discovered the spectacular scenery of China's interior, where they admired the rice terraces and resisted the urge to body surf on the rapids of the Li River.

One of Erica's books was optioned by Warner Brothers, and she has a new book coming out in 2008. She also has entered into a deal to write three children's fantasy books.

Suzanne Krachun Green is in her eighth year with Capital One in Richmond. Her job has sent her to the United Kingdom twice this year. Suzanne has kept up her interest in horses and riding, and her daughter, Catherine, 12, is having success showing their pony. Her son, Alex, 11, loves basketball.

Lorraine Keller Butler is the corporate chef for a division of Sodexho. When she is not on the road, she works in Maryland developing recipes and menus for clients, running a culinary competition, working on a magazine, and consulting with manufacturers on new products. Lorraine and her husband have two children, a 16-year-old son and a 13-year-old daughter, and they all love to travel. She is still a sports enthusiast and spends her free time on skiing, kayaking, tennis, golf, and yoga.

Suzanne "Suzie" Cronin Hendricks stopped working two years ago to focus on her children, Jake, 10, Tyler, 8, and Sarah, 4. She is active in the PTA, teaching catechism at St. Bridget's Church, and managing the swim team database for their pool. She's also preparing for a half-marathon.

Vicky Stuelpnagel Murray and Keith L. Murray, B'87, adopted a daughter, Samantha Ainsley, in September 2006. Vicky has worked for a benefits administration software company for 16 years, and Keith is a financial advisor with Merrill Lynch. They live in Baltimore, where they occasionally find time for golf or tennis.

Maria LoCastro Dangel and her husband, Dayton Dangel, live in Valley Center, Calif., with their children, Laura Elyse, 12, and Dayton Anthony, 8. Maria has been a stay-at-home mom for a while, but she started substitute teaching last year.

She also teaches Sunday school and helps out with choreography with her daughter's plays. Jill Somers Aveson and her family visited the Angels this summer.

Lisa Eye married Kentucky native Jerry Taylor in August at The Presbyterian Church in Danville, Ky., where she has served as associate pastor since last fall. Jerry is a librarian at the Boyle County Library. Lisa makes regular trips to Fredericksburg, Va., to see her family.

Diana Freas-Lutz and her husband, Raymond, have lived on St. Croix since 2000. Diana is a laboratory supervisor and adjunct faculty member in forensic science at the University of the Virgin Islands.

My husband, Dan Lynch, I'87, and I live in Richmond with our daughter, Caroline, 7. My part-time job heading up the Virginia Capitol Foundation continues with the reopening of the newly restored and expanded Jefferson-designed statehouse. Please come to visit when you're in downtown Richmond.

TRUSTEES

W. Gordon Cousins Jr., R'49, of Richmond died Aug. 13. He worked his way up to vice president and general manager of Richmond-based Interbake Foods, retiring in 1991 to take a part-time fundraising job at the University. As a special assistant to the president, he persuaded many prominent alumni to become more involved with the University.

Cousins served on numerous alumni committees, the Board of Associates, and the Board of Trustees from 1987-91. He also served as a deacon of Derbyshire Baptist Church.

FACULTY

James Elliott Hendricks Sr. of Richmond died July 7. He joined the adjunct faculty of University College in 1965, teaching in the Transportation and Logistics Management Program for 38 years. He received the Distinguished Faculty Award from the School of Continuing Studies in 1990 and was awarded emeritus status in 2003.

Dr. James A. Moncure, R'49, of Burlington, N.C., died July 27. After graduating from Richmond, he earned his master's and doctoral degrees at Columbia, returning to Richmond in 1954 to teach history. He was promoted to professor of history in 1967 and served as dean of University College from 1968 to 1973.

Moncure left the University to become Elon College's vice president for academic and student affairs. He returned to the classroom at Elon in 1982 and retired in 1987. His wife, Jane Belk Moncure, W'48, is a prolific author of children's books.

STAFF

Alice F. Powell of Richmond died June 7, 2007. She worked as a secretary in the University's business and finance office from 1956-93.

Robert R. Weertman of Richmond died July 31. He worked as a library associate in the Muse Law Library for the past 25 years.

VANTAGE POINT

CATCHING UP WITH OURSELVES ON ENVIRONMENTAL COMMITMENTS

By Steve Nash

If you read "Going Green" on page 22, you get a sense of how much Richmond is doing about the environment. We can give ourselves a pat on the back, but is it really good enough?

A few years ago UR's president, along with hundreds of other university presidents around the world, signed the Talloires Declaration. It pledges, in part, to "create an institutional culture of sustainability, educate for environmentally responsible citizenship," and "foster environmental literacy for all."

But a balanced appraisal of our "culture of sustainability" would be mixed. There was, for example, the national "Recyclemania" competition of 2006, in which some really dedicated UR students worked hard to whip up campus interest. We finished a ruleful 42nd out of 44 schools overall.

Not that I blame the students. Maybe they were just waiting for the right leadership. In fact, there are strong indications that they grasp a key point: While individual commitments to recycle paper and turn off lights matter, institutions can leverage more meaningful changes.

Last spring, students presented an unprecedented petition with more than 1,000 signatures to incoming President Edward Ayers, seeking new policies "to make UR a 'greener' place to live." It calls for "green dorms," the appointment of a full-time administrator for sustainability issues, and an activist stance, including a voice for students, on using shareholder votes in the University's endowment portfolio to modify corporate behavior.

Another hint about how we are doing came in a recent report card from a group called the Sustainable Endowments Institute, which rated 100 institutions with the largest endowments in the United States and Canada (in other words, the schools that cannot plead poverty). Richmond got a composite grade of C, which included a D for climate change and energy initiatives. We flunked "shareholder engagement." The Sustainable Endowments Institute does not have the last word on our progress, but we certainly could reflect a little on those marks.

"UR has another opportunity for environmental leadership at hand."

You could even argue that the grade of B, awarded for our efforts on "green building," is a moving target. A growing number of schools around the country have made more aggressive, on-the-record commitments to green building standards than Richmond has, according to Julian Dautremont-Smith, director of the Association for the Advancement of Sustainability in Higher Education (UR is not a member). In our own region, the list includes Furman, Clemson, Emory, North Carolina-Chapel Hill, and others.

UR has another opportunity for environmental leadership at hand—the American College and University Presidents Climate Commitment, which about 400 schools have signed as of this writing. It has tangible, measurable commitments, with deadlines, to achieve "climate neutrality." That means we reduce our greenhouse gas emissions as much as possible and offset the rest through support of off-campus projects that cut emissions.

Within a year of signing, we would inventory all greenhouse gas emissions from electricity, heating, commuting, and air travel. Within two years, we would have to develop an institutional plan for becoming climate-neutral "as soon as possible."

Among the signers so far in Virginia alone are Emory & Henry, Ferrum, George Mason, Hollins, James Madison, Lynchburg, Norfolk State, Randolph, Shenandoah, Sweet Briar, Virginia Wesleyan, and Washington and Lee.

Ultimately, it does not matter so much what others are doing. Our best efforts grow from our own sense of ourselves.

On that score, President Ayers has posed a couple of questions to the UR community. One is, "What do we want to be known for?" And he has described his first-year reconnaissance among us as "heat-seeking"—asking, that is, "What needs immediate attention?" Thanks in large measure to strong signals from our students, here is the same answer to both questions: our university's environmental commitments.

Associate Professor Steve Nash teaches in the journalism and environmental studies programs. His latest book, Millipedes and Moon Tigers—Science and Policy in an Age of Extinction, was published this year by University of Virginia Press.

*H*ONOR ROLL OF DONORS 2007-08

THANK YOU

Dear Richmond Alumni, Parents and Friends,

For more than 175 years, Richmond has continued to build upon a tradition of philanthropy that has made our story unique in the history of American academia. The following pages illustrate this ongoing story and demonstrate the value many of our graduates place on their Richmond education. The financial support of our alumni, parents, and friends is as important to the well-being of Richmond and its students today as it was in 1830 or 1930 or will be in 2030.

As we prepare for graduation this spring, we are more aware than ever of the impact personal philanthropy has played in our lives over the past three and a half years. Our benefactors make Richmond a special place. We look forward to joining their ranks!

On behalf of the University of Richmond and our fellow students, thank you for your ongoing kindness and generosity.

Sincerely,

Steven Horvath, '08

YOUR GIFT IN ACTION...STUDENT OPPORTUNITIES

"I am very grateful for the substantial opportunities I have received over the years. Because of the many resources available to students at the University, I have been able to pursue my interests—such as being a co-founder of the Dance Squad—and devote time to volunteering at various sites in the city of Richmond. Thanks for making it all possible."

Zimelka A. Smits '08
